BANDITS BIND MANAGER, LOOT SAFE

Two armed strip-bandits escaped with nearly $15,000 in cash today after holding up Sam's Restaurant in Nantasket, but four other armed bandits missed $10,000 at the brewery of Haffenreffer & Company, Inc., Jamaica Plain, where they fled with a policeman's service revolver.

In Jamaica Plain, two men, carrying revolvers and a brown-paper-wrapped box, as if to simulate a package delivery, entered the brewery offices, thrust two girls into a closet and tried to force the auditor to open the safe, which held collections after the week-end.

The auditor protested, however, that he did not know the combination, and apparently fearing to stay longer the pair dashed out.

In the company yard they came upon Patrolman Michael J. Donovan, assigned from Jamaica Plain station to be on hand when the money was transferred to a bank truck.

Donovan felt something jab him in the back and heard a voice say, "Stick 'em up!"

THOUGHT IT PRANK

Thinking someone was playing a prank, he started to turn, but a second man came from behind and thrust a pistol into his stomach, while the man behind pinioned his arms.

"We mean it," said the gunman in front. "All we want is your gun."

As the officer's revolver was taken from its holster, a small sedan, bearing license plates issued to another make of car in the name of a Somerville man, wheeled into the yard and the two men left Donovan, ran to the machine, joined two others in the sedan and then sped away into Bismark street.

Meanwhile, an employe of the American District Telegraph Company, at work repairing lines at the plant, had seen the by-play in the yard and sounded an alarm.

Air Boats Safely Span Atlantic

Chart Route for Regular Flights

By the Associated Press

Two mighty flying "ships that pass in the night" successfully charted a route for regular commercial flights between North America and Europe today.

The Pan-American Clipper III landed at Foynes, Ireland, after a 1960-mile survey hop from Botwood, Newfoundland, making the ocean jump in 12 hours and 40 minutes.

The British Imperial Airways flying boat Caledonia completed the westward hop of 1990 from Foynes to Botwood in 15 hours and nine minutes.

Neither passengers nor mail was carried.

The pioneering craft passed each other 100 miles apart in the thinning darkness over the North Atlantic. The Caledonia landed at Botwood at 6:06 A. M. E. D. T. The Pan American Clipper alighted majestically on the River Shannon at Foynes at 5:50 A. M. E. D. T.

Guild, A. F. of L. Dispute Closes Seattle Star

Seattle, July 6—The Seattle Star, member of the Scripps League of Newspapers, temporarily suspended today after the American Newspaper Guild called a strike in a dispute over union affiliations of circulation men.

More than 200 employes were made idle as a result of the strike.

Picket lines were made up of editorial, advertising and circulation employes, members of the guild, an affiliate of the CIO. Composers and pressmen did not attempt to pass the pickets.

The teamsters, aided by police, moved four delivery trucks to the newspaper's empty loading platforms.

The dispute arose last week when the Teamsters Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, declined to deliver two editions because the circulation men had joined the guild instead of the teamsters' new affiliate, the Newspaper Drivers & Helpers Union.

The Star management, saying it was caught between two rival unions, declared it might be forced to suspend permanently. The management added it was attempting to act as a conciliator in the trouble.

COURT FIGHT OPENED BY ROBINSON

Washington, July 6 (AP)—Democratic Leader Robinson, opening the fight for the administration's judicial reorganization bill, told the Senate today that judges more than 75 years of age "usually are in a state of mental and physical decline."

As he spoke, Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana, leader of the opposition to the judiciary reorganization plan, emerged from a long White House conference and said he was still opposed to any compromise which would add any justices to the Supreme Court.

Wheeler and Senator Bone (D.) of Washington talked with the President for an hour and a half, soon after the latter returned from a five-day stay at Hyde Park, N. Y.

The Montanan declined to go into details, but did say the court bill was discussed. He added, however, that the parliamentary situation in the Senate would not be affected by the talk.

Robinson began the Senate debate after that chamber had agreed without a record vote to

Knox Lauds Labor Policy of Britain

New York, July 6 (INS)—Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago, Republican Vice Presidential candidate last year, returned on the liner Europa today from a two months' study of the labor movement and social security in Europe.

He said England has been outstanding in the treatment of labor, particularly in establishing responsibility of labor towards employers and the general economic problem.

Ickes Will Live in Office Suite

Washington, July 6 (AP)—Secretary Ickes, prevented by recent illness from making daily trips between the city and his farm home, set up living quarters today in his office suite in the Internor Department.

Ickes was at his desk today for the first time since he went to naval hospital about a month ago for treatment of a stomach ailment.

Boy Hurt in Stolen Plane Nose Dive

Somerset, Pa., July 6 (INS)—Willard Beers, 19, of Drumis, Pa., was critically injured today when an airplane which he allegedly stole crashed into the business district here.

The ship, which authorities said was stolen from the county airport, went into a nose dive within a block of the courthouse, and crashed into an outbuilding.

HOPING FOR NEWS OF RESCUE

Wide World Photo

The old adage that "no news is good news" is not helpful to George Palmer Putnam, husband of Amelia Earhart, nor to Mrs. Frederick J. Noonan, wife of Amelia's navigator, as the two anxiously scan radio reports indicating that no definite clue has yet been obtained to the whereabouts of Amelia and Noonan, missing with their plane somewhere in the South Pacific, in the vicinity of tiny Howland island.

RADIO CALL RAISES HOPE FOR AMELIA

BULLETINS

Honolulu, T. H., July 6 (INS)—A faint carrier wave on the frequency of Amelia Earhart's missing plane was picked up by the coast guard radio station here today, but operators were unable to determine the direction of it. The humming wave continued from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. (Eastern daylight time).

Washington, July 6 (AP) — The battleship Colorado reported at noon (EDT) today she would not be ready to send planes in search of Amelia Earhart until 1 p. m. tomorrow. The Colorado gave her position as about 300 miles east and 450 miles north of Howland—too far away from the search sector to launch her planes.

Honolulu, July 6 (AP)—Vessels from three nations pursued the widening mid-Pacific search today for Amelia Earhart, after the flock of meteors was mistaken for flares from her missing plane.

The long-searching coast guard cutter Itasca, which sighted the lights that proved to be meteors, advised Washington at 1:54 p. m. (E. D. T.) that no new information was available on the missing aviatrix and her navigator.

A redio amateur at Oakland, Calif., reported h. picked up a message from the aviatrix at 10:35 a. m. (Eastern daylight time), despite the fact that authorities agreed she could not broadcast had her plane alighted on the water, and that the approximate position indicated already had been searched unsuccessfully by the cutter Itasca.

The amateur, Charles Miguel, said the massage read:

"281 North Howland. Cannot hold out much longer. Drifting southwest. We above water. Motor sinking in water. Very wet."

200 Indicted After Steel Strike Riots

Youngstown, O., July 6 (AP)—Indictments against more than 200 persons, including Robert Burke and John Stevens, alias Stevenson, who were dismissed last week as SWOC organizers, were returned today by the Mahoning County grand jury after a four-day investigation of "all violence and disorders" in the steel strike.

Cleveland, July 6 (AP)—National Guard bayonets and machine-guns protected the back-to-work movement of an estimated 3000 steel workers at three plants of the Republic Steel Corporation here today.

Company officials gave the following figures for returning day-shift employes after the 7 a. m. "zero hour" for the reopenings passed without a single reported case of violence:

Corrigan-McKinney works—1500 men returned out of normal two-shift total of 3700.

Upson Nut & Bolt division—850 men returned out of normal two-shift total of 1700.

Truscon Steel—600 men returned out of normal two-shift total of 750.

CIO strike leaders disputed the company's figures and asserted that many of the men were office workers and clerks—not steel makers.

vestigation of Miguel's report, which was apparently not heard by other stations.

Japanese and British vessels were to aid American ships in the widening search, spurred after hope was buoyed by the report of the flares.

HOPE SOARS, FADES

Despite the disappointment, the search continued today, with a prospect its center probably would shift from a point 280 miles north of Howland Island to the Phoenix Islands, an equal distance southward.

Hope of immediate rescue of Miss Earhart and Frederick J. Noonan, navigator of her $80,000 "flying laboratory," soared when the Itasca was overheard at 4:45 a. m. eastern daylight time, radioing the plane:

"We can see your flares. Are coming toward you."

Forty-five minutes later came a second message:

"We see your flares. Go ahead."

Then came anti-climax when officers of the cutter reported the lookout might have mistaken heat flashes for a flare, and later their decision it was "probably a meteor."

Tiny Howland Island, goal of Miss Earhart's 2556-mile flight from British New Guinea last Friday, also reported seeing the lights. Flares carried by the missing plane could not have been sighted from both the island and the cutter.

PUTNAM'S THEORY

The phantom lights were seen when a fragmentary radio message yesterday indicated the fliers, forced down by gasoline shortage, were drifting.

Miss Earhart's husband, George Palmer Putnam, however, was so firmly convinced the message was misinterpreted, the San Francisco coast guard sent out a message to searching ships of three nations asking them to shift their hunt 280 miles southeast of Howland Island.

Putnam based his opinion on the inability of his wife's radio to operate when the plane is in the water. The Lockheed plant, builders of the plane, verified his opinion concerning the radio. Putnam has held persistently to the belief she reached one of the tiny atolls which dot the equatorial Pacific. None of them is within 300 miles north of Howland.

Lieutenant Frank Johnson, San Francisco coast guard communications officer, radioed the battleship Colorado, nearing the scene from Honolulu, a suggestion that the warship send her three planes today to fly over the Phoenix Islands.

HAVEN ON REEF

Officials here also began to share the belief that Miss Earhart, if alive, had found a temporary haven on some remote reef. They indicated the search would veer toward Phoenix.

Coast guardsmen, however, commented:

"We can't overlook any bet. We must consider the possibility that Miss Earhart picked up new radio equipment somewhere on her flight, and also Noonan's known adaptability."

They suggested Noonan may have adapted the radio to work when the plane was on the water, possibly from spark batteries.

Their attitude indicated the Itasca, the navy mine sweeper Swan, and the British freighter Moorby might continue searching north of Howland.

MESSAGES BELIEVED

None of the observers doubted that at least some of the many messages purporting to come from Miss Earhart's radio were authentic.

"There is reason to believe," Putnam conceded at the San Francisco coast guard station where he listened to reports, "that some of the half-intelligible messages were actually from my wife."

It was "impossible" he said for this to be correct if she were adrift at sea.

The San Francisco coast guard reported that a computation on the basis of a bearing taken from yesterday's radio signals by Pan-American Airways and Miss Earhart's last known message "give indication of her position in the Phoenix group."

AIRCRAFT CARRIER ON WAY

They also hinted that when the $40,000,000 United States aircraft carrier Lexington and an accompanying fleet of four destroyers join the search they will swing to the Phoenix group. This armada is en route from San Diego, Cal., via Honolulu, where they will refuel.

American naval officers hazarded no guess as to what course the Japanese airplane carrier, Kamoi, speeding from the South Pacific to join the hunt, would pursue.

The cost of the various rescue expeditions mounted into unofficial estimates of hundreds of thousands of dollars, as ships of three nations sped to the hunt.

The message which suddenly converged the search 280 miles north of Howland was heard at 8:12 a. m. Eastern Daylight Time, yesterday.

BLURRED BY STATIC

"281 North Howland . . . call KHAQG (the signature of the Earhart plane) . . . beyond north . . . . don't hold with us much longer . . . above water . . . shut off."

Searching agencies interpreted the message—if it came from the missing fliers—as indicating various things—that the plane was sinking, that radio transmission was failing because of weakening batteries, that the plane was floating, and that gasoline necessary to turn the right motor and furnish electricity was near exhaustion.

Putnam was heartened by the message, but he expressed belief the pair were southeast of Howland, in the Phoenix Island group, about 250 miles south.

NO LAND TO NORTH

There is no known land near the position north of Howland.

As the Itasca veered its course to race to the position, it radioed here:

The speedy little vessel reached the area about 7 o'clock last night, and coast guard authorities in San Francisco estimated she was about 20 minutes ahead of the slower Swan, ploughing southward.

The British freighter Moorby, enroute from Victoria, B. C., to Sydney, Australia, turned from its course to join the search, but was not expected to reach the precise position given before 9:30 a. m., Eastern daylight time.

JAPAN OFFICERS AID

International cooperation was volunteered by Japan. That nation instructed all its ships and shore radio operators to keep watch for possible new clues, and Putnam said he had received, through the newspaper Nichi Nichi, a telephoned offer by the Japanese government to assign warships to the hunt. He said acceptance of rejection of that offer would be left to the United States naval authorities.

Additional international action would be necessary, the State Department advised, if Putnam's theory of his wife's whereabouts is to be checked. The Phoenix Islands are British, and the State Department informed coast guard officials it would await the result of the search north of Howland before entering that government's aid.

Throughout the black, tropic night, the Itasca and Swan planned to patrol the unknown, open sea north of Howland cutting the gloom with their searchlights and then watching for possible flares from the plane.

Their search procedure was to make long sweeps in one direction for 10 miles or more, then turn at right angles and proceed for a similar distance before veering again.

CHARTS A BLANK

Coast Guard maps show no land or even coral atolls in the entire area, which is not frequented by boats and is far off shipping lanes.

From today's focus the search was expected to spread, if necessary, into a general survey of the whole South Pacific area adjacent to the route plotted by Miss Earhart on her flight from Lae, New Guinea, to Howland.

That would be made possible by the arrival of the U. S. naval vessels, carrying aircraft which could search hundreds of square miles, while surface vessels covered only a narrow strip.

For the third night, radio KGMB, Honolulu commercial station, broadcast instructions to the missing plane to make an effort to locate it through replies.

On the two previous nights, the station's queries were answered by apparent code replies and undistinguishable voice transmission, of little but little value in the hunt. During last night, the plane was asked to break its transmission wave twice if it was on land, and three times if on the water.

Putnam and Mrs. Noonan, bride of the missing navigator, kept constant vigil as the hours passed without definite word.

Putnam agreed with the expressed belief of Pan-American Airways radio operators that direction finder bearings indicated the supposed messages from his wife originated in the Phoenix group. The Pan-American operators said the bearings ran directly through the group and said the ship might be down in the vicinity of Gardner and McKean Islands, between 150 and 200 miles southwest of Howland.

Living up to the best traditions of the United States coast guard service are men and officers of the cutter Itasca, now leading the search for Amelia Earhart Putnam and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan. Shown in the picture as it was standing off Howland Island, awaiting the coming of the Earhart plane, the Itasca put to sea at once, when it became evident that Miss Earhart was in distress. Today, far to the north of Howland Island, the cutter was short of water and provisions, its men refusing to quit the search enduring thirst and hunger, rather than discontinue the search, even temporarily.

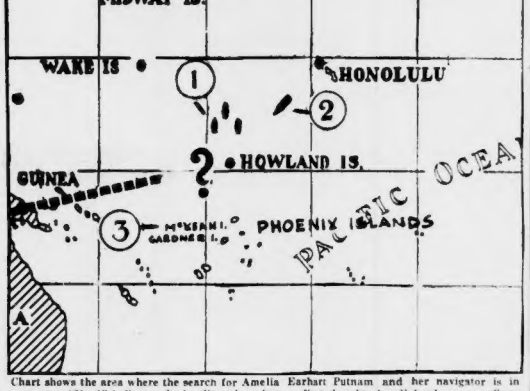

Chart shows the area where the search for Amelia Earhart Putnam and her navigator is in progress. "No. 1" indicates the locality where it was first thought Amelia's plane was afloat, 280 miles northeast of Howland Island. This area is being searched by three vessels, the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Itasca, the U. S. Navy mine sweeper Swan and the British freighter Moorby. "No. 2" indicates the U. S. S. Colorado, nearing Howland Island, bringing three naval airplanes to aid the search. "No. 3" indicates Phoenix Island group, where it is now believed Amelia and Noonan may have landed, well to the southwest of Howland Island.

Emmet Named Austrian Envoy

Washington, July 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt sent to the Senate today the nomination of Greenville T. Emmet of New York to be minister to Austria. Emmet, now minister to the Netherlands, will succeed George S. Messersmith, recently appointed assistant secretary of state.

AMELIA IGNORED CALL OF ITASCA ON HOP

Honolulu, July 6 (AP)—The last decipherable message received from Amelia Earhart's plane while it still was in the air, was at 8:44 a. m., Howland time (4:14 p. m. eastern daylight time) Friday. The coast guard disclosed today this message said:

"We are on the line of position 157-337 . . . We are now running north and south."

Forty-seven minutes earlier Miss Earhart had messaged:

"We are circling but cannot see island; cannot hear you."

The coast guard serving at Washington was told by the Itasca's commander that as the Earhart plane winged toward Howland on the flight from Lae, the fliers neither acknowledged nor complied with repeated instructions from the Itasca to transmit on 500 kilocycles.

Negro Cadet Resigns

Washington, July 6 (AP)—Representative Mitchell (D-Ill.) said today he has learned that George J. Travers, Negro, whom he recently appointed to the Naval Academy at Annapolis has resigned from the academy.

HOLIDAY TOLL

43 Die in N. E., Scores Injured Over Weekend

New England's record-breaking July Fourth week-end, which packed highways and pleasure resorts, exacted 43 deaths by drownings, crashes and other accidents, a checkup revealed today.

Of the six states Massachusetts led with 19 fatalities. Maine counted nine dead, New Hampshire four, Rhode Island six, Connecticut four and Vermont one.

Oddly enough, Massachusetts and Rhode Island listed the only two deaths in the nation directly attributed to fireworks. The casualties recorded were:

MASSACHUSETTS

IRENE REGAN, 8, of Tremont street, Cambridge, drowned in two feet of water in Frog Pond, Boston Common.

HOWARD C. MARSH, 48, of Roxbury, fatally burned when a cannon he was loading exploded.

ANTHONY ANTONELLI, 47, of Perkins street, Somerville, and ALFRED CARDERELLI, 38, of the same address, drowned at Revere Beach.

BERTIL BYLUND, 22, of Auburn, killed in Worcester when his bicycle was struck by auto.

ALBERT CHAINE, 35, and JAMES CASEY, 35, both of Springfield, drowned in Hampton Pond, Holyoke, canoe upset.

MAINE

LOUISE RAMO, 19, of Fort Fairfield, dead of injuries suffered in auto crash near Caribou.

WALTER JOYCE, 9, of Riverton, drowned at Scarboro school picnic.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

MRS. MAY HARTFORD, 60, and MRS. RODMAN F. CROWELL, 75, both of Plaistow, killed by auto while returning home from bonfire.

Nation's Death Toll 563 for Fourth Fete

By Associated Press

A total of 563 men, women and children met violent death in the two-day celebration of the nation's 161st birthday.

The toll was believed the highest in the history of America's observance of Independence Day.

Only four deaths were attributed directly to fireworks. Traffic accidents constituted the biggest single cause. A total of 210 persons were fatally injured on streets and highways.

There were 142 drownings Sunday and Monday. During the same period 157 persons died violently in other ways.

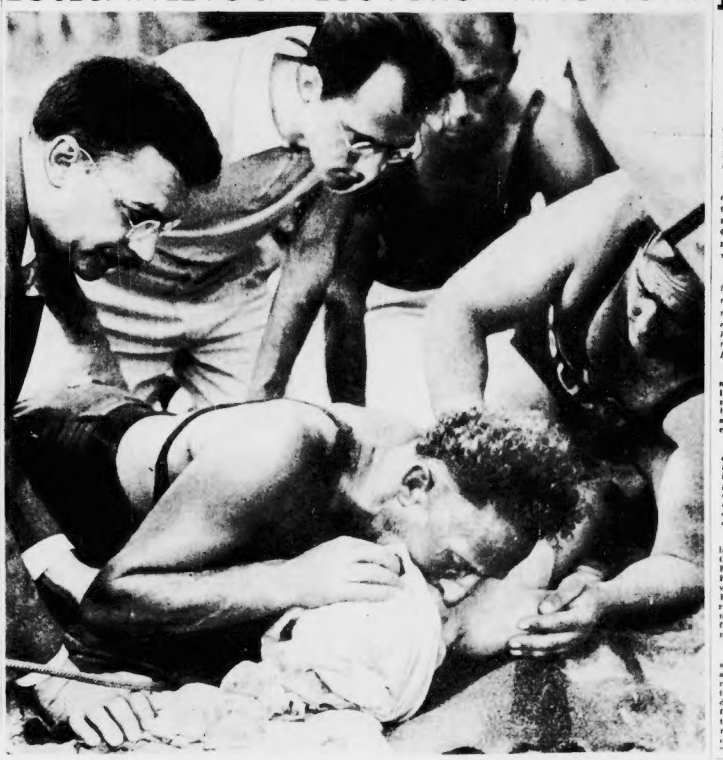
Father in Anguish as Lifeguards' Frantic Efforts Fail

LOSE BATTLE TO SAVE BOY DROWNING VICTIM



Bowed with grief, Anthony Boschetti realizes that efforts of the Revere lifeguards to save his five year old son, Anthony, Jr., are fruitless. The boy's twin brother seems stunned by the suddenness of it all, while the victim's aunt hides her grief in a kerchief.

Lifeguards battle vainly to save the life of little Anthony Boschetti, five, holiday drowning victim at Revere Beach. As one guard applies the prone method of resuscitation, another lifeguard breathes into the boy's lungs. A doctor kneels by, directing their efforts, all to no avail.

Holiday merry-makers reported their festivities were handicapped by the bees and asked aid. Police responded with the gas and received only a few stings from "the enemy."

Job for an Oculist

Pocatello, Idaho, July 6 (AP)—Bulls can see an eyeful at night, members of two softball teams here have decided.

Outfielders kept one eye on the ball and the other on the ball when one stacked onto their lighted field to graze.

Given Probation For Abandoning Boy in Theater

Providence, R. I., July 6 (AP)—Mrs. Edna Gladys Jensen, 40, of Elizabeth, N. J., who pleaded guilty on Saturday of abandoning six-year-old Charles W. Dilmars of Rahway, N. J., in a theater last Wednesday, was placed on probation by Judge Maurice Robinson today.

Nervous, Mrs. Jensen, mother of four children, told Judge Robinson that she realized she had made a mistake.

"I am very much interested in your children," Judge Robinson told the woman, after Miss Nora F. McCormick, probation officer, reported that she had communicated with New Jersey welfare officials who said Mrs. Jensen is needed at home.

One of her children, the court was informed, is recovering from an operation.

The judge declared that his interest was "in keeping your family together."

Mrs. McCormick told the court that the story told by Mrs. Jensen following her arrest was found to be correct and added, "I think she was a tool for the man."

The father of the child, Charles E. Dilmars came in the city with the woman and Detective Kane Friday night, but police said he has since returned to his home in Rahway. The child is still held at the Doyle avenue home of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

High Court to Hear Plea on Primaries

A special session of the Supreme Court will be held next Monday to hear a petition for writ of mandamus filed today in connection with the recent act of the legislature repealing the law providing for party primaries and preprimary conventions. Judge Fred T. Field will preside.

The petition, filed by 11 taxpayers of the state, seeks to compel Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook to provide blanks for a referendum of the legislative act.

Sally Rand Comes to N. E.

Fanless Artist To Appear in Dramatics

Sally Rand, she of the fans, was in Lakewood, Me., today, determined to discard her ostrich plumes for a summer season of old-fashioned drama with concealing gowns and tragic roles.

Passing through East Boston airport enroute to her engagement with the Skowhegan Players, Sally announced her ultimate ambition is to play Lady Macbeth. It's not impossible, either, she avowed, for fan-dancing is an art that fits one for Shakespearian roles.

"To what," she was asked, "do you attribute the popularity of your fan dance?"

She prophesied that future generations will allot her fan dance its true measure of worth.

"Like Wagner, you know," she said. "They didn't consider him a great composer in his own day."

Sally will appear with the Skowhegan Players as the pathetic little slavey in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." In Ogunquit, she will play in "They Knew What They Wanted" and with the Provincetown Players she will enact Tondalayo in "White Cargo."

Jardine in N. Y. for Tour

Pastor to Duke Calls Self "Sky Pilot"

New York, July 6—The Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine, the small-town English pastor who defied the Archbishop of Canterbury to marry the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield, was in New York today prepared to start his American lecture tour by air.

Here to tell Americans "how to be good Christians," the Rev. Jardine, who calls himself a "sky pilot," after his arrival on the Queen Mary with Mrs Jardine, discussed his plans with Hugh C. Ernst, president of the radio organization which is financing his trip.

The English vicar will preach Sunday night at the Methodist Broadway temple. He told how he always wanted to preach in America." He has plans for his return to England, too, but doubts he'll be able to speak on the government-controlled radio.

"There's a worse censorship over there than Hitler's or Mussolini's," he said.

Speaking in glowing terms of the marriage of the duke and duchess, he said:

Two Girls, 17, Stage Fatal Gun Duel

Coushatta, La., July 6 (US)—Settling an old grudge, two 17-year-old girls met with pistols and shot it out in a pasture near here.

May Elvin Allen was fatally wounded. Her opponent, Jessie Pepper, was held in jail on a charge of murder. Sheriff Floyd Jones of Red River parish, said:

"The shooting, I believe, grew out of an old grudge. There had been talk about one of the girls. Then the mothers got into it . . . a lot of gossip. They all met in the pasture and the shooting followed."

Men in the two families, residents here for years, are employed in the oil fields.

BISHOP WARNS C. D. A. OF PERIL FROM DIVORCE

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 6—The "price of disobedience and divorce" has been confusion and chaos in government, industry and in the home, at once the Most Rev. William J. Hafey, D. D., told the Catholic Daughters of America here today.

Appealing to the world to return to the "spiritual unity that was the world's only hope in the first century as it is the world's only hope in the 20th," Bishop Hafey, diocesan head of Raleigh, N. C., advised attending all sects with the Catholic Church. Six hundred delegates attended.

The bishop's address was given at a pontifical high mass, attended by the many high 600 delegates to the seventeenth biennial convention of the Catholic Daughters. The Most Rev. John B. Peterson, Bishop of Manchester, N. H., celebrated the mass.

Business sessions of the convention were opened just before noon, with Miss Mary C. Duffy presiding. The Juniors of the organization were presenting a program after the luncheon, at which Mrs. Alice B. McGlinchey, state regent of New Hampshire, presided.

JUNIORS EXHIBIT

In the banquet room of the Mt. Washington Hotel, headquarters of the convention, an interesting exhibition of the work of the Juniors was thronged with visitors all day.

Subjects to be treated upon in the program of reports include activities of the Legion of Decency, the organized opposition to distribution of birth control literature, federal education, indecent advertising and literature, and the campaign for fighting Communism.

That the last named subject is considered one of the most important of the convention was stressed by Governor Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire in a keynote address.

"Doctrines of communism and fascism are fastening themselves like some rank fungus upon the sturdy body of the great tree into which democracy in America has grown," Governor Murphy declared.

"Permit them to grow unchecked and they will in time choke, weaken and finally destroy the tree of government."

strong, reported "all quiet" throughout Cleveland area.

Stormier scenes were enacted at Niles and Warren, O., where several hundred union sympathizers massed along routes to Republic Steel mills and unleashed stone-throwing barrages at non-strikers going back to work.

Rocks smashed a taxicab windshield at Warren, and half a dozen workers' automobiles were dented by bricks heaved at them as they motored to work at Niles.

CLEAR MYSTERY MARCH

A brief-lived "mystery over the mobilization of 400 National Guardsmen at Akron, O., the big rubber-making center, was dissolved when officers said the troopers were merely being held for duty "anywhere in northwestern Ohio."

The back-to-work movement in Cleveland, breaking the siege which has kept Republic's plants locked since May 26, left independent steel companies in a position to claim that with the exception of a few plants, all their mills were operating at least partially throughout the 7-state strike area.

Only a few pickets heckled the workers going back to their jobs.

A fourth plant, Steel & Tube, which was scheduled to reopen along with the others at 7 a. m. was kept shut for the time being.

In addition to the National Guardsmen, 384 city police and 75 deputies enforced peace in the "dangerous strike zones" proclaimed by Sheriff Martin O'Donnell within a radius of 1,500 yards of each plant.

A big crowd, booing in chorus, massed on the rim of a bluff overlooking the Corrigan-McKinney plant as seven hundred automobile-loads of non-strikers rolled through the company gates.

"Come on, you guys," one of the strike sentinels repeated shrilly, "why don't you get behind the union? Tom Girdler (chairman of Republic Steel) is just fooling you. He'll make you stew in your own juice."

CIO rallied a police-estimated 1500 workers at Cleveland last night. Speakers scoffed at Republic's claim that 85 per cent of the workers in its Cleveland mills were anxious to quit the strike.

Republic now has its mills operating on every other sector of the strike front—in the Mahoning Valley, in Monroe, Mich., at Buffalo, N. Y., and at South Chicago.

R. J. Damich, regional director of the strike, told the Cleveland rally not to be misled by the sight of smoke rolling from the company stacks today.

ASSURES PEACE

Damich assured police that the strikers would be orderly. None would be armed, he said, and picketing would be confined to 12 men at each entrance, as required by the sheriff's orders.

Damich warned the strikers last night to "keep your automobiles locked, so company men can't plant firearms in them."

Company officials looked for no decrease in the size of its working force, despite the union rally Sunday at which Governor George Earle of Pennsylvania was a speaker, together with Philip Murray, head of the SWOC, the CIO affiliate which is conducting the strike.

Governor Clifford Townsend of Indiana was expected back from a brief holiday today. Awaiting him was an appeal from a group of ministers of Indiana Harbor, Ind., for state troops "to prevent bloodshed."

Picket Killed by Car At Strike-Bound Plant

Menominee, Mich., July 6 (AP)—Joseph Jozwiak, 42, was accidentally killed today in a clash between pickets and workers at the strike-bound Lloyd Manufacturing Company plant.

Jozwiak, a picket, was fatally hurt when he slipped and fell under an automobile entering the plant driveway and was dragged nearly 300 feet. He died a half hour later in a hospital.

The fatality occurred when the firm attempted today to reopen its plant, closed by a walkout since June 22.

10th Torso Murder in Cleveland

Man's Headless Body Found in River

Cleveland, July 6 (AP)—The headless body of a man, described by Chief Detective Inspector Joseph Sweeney as Cleveland's tenth torso murder victim, was taken from the Cuyahoga river near a railroad bridge here today.

Inspector Sweeney said the torso was discovered by two National Guardsmen in Cleveland for strike duty at the Republic Steel Corp. plants. They were Capt. Marion F. Adams and Capt. Robert Stewart, both of the 147th Ohio infantry.

The detective inspector said that the head of the victim had been severed cleanly as in all of the previous killings. The appearance of the body indicated to him, he said, that the mad killer who has been at work in Cleveland for more than two years, had taken another victim.

NEAR NO. 9

The skeleton of the ninth victim of the head hunter, a Negro woman about 35 years old, was found less than a month ago under a Cuyahoga river bridge not far from the spot where the torso was found today.

Today's victim was the sixth man to fall before the killer's knife. Four women have been decapitated and dismembered in the series of killings.

The first torso, that of a woman, was found Sept. 5, 1934, on the shore of Lake Erie.

"CARVED LIKE OTHERS"

Coroner S. R. Gerber, after an examination of the body, said "this man has been carved up just like the others."

Dr. Gerber said the victim was a powerful man, weighing between 180 and 200 pounds. He had been dead about two days, the coroner said.

The arms and legs of the victim had been severed and the torso cut into two pieces. One arm and the left thigh also were found in the river.

TIMILTY ENDS SHIFT TALK

Police Commissioner Timilty in an emphatic statement today denied that Captain Thomas F. Connolly of the Warren avenue station, South End, would be transferred.

Answering questions of reporters, the commissioner said:

"Captain Connolly is not going to be transferred. I wish all the captains were doing the efficiency work that Captain Connolly is doing."

Repeated raids in the South End by Captain James T. Sheehan's "racket squad" led to the report of Captain Connolly's transfer. Within the past 16 days, Captain Sheehan and his squad have arrested 48 persons in two South End raids.

Captain Connolly was placed in charge of the Warren avenue station last February after Commissioner Timilty had removed two captains from the command, when Governor Hurley started his drive against the operation of night clubs after closing hours.

Harvard Legal Aid Bureau Reopens

The needy of Cambridge will have their legal difficulties solved gratis by the Legal Aid Bureau of Harvard University, which opened today after being discontinued for two years.

Under the direction of Vernon Marr, attorney for the Boston Legal Aid Society, the bureau will be open daily with the exception of Saturday from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m. It will be located in the Gannett House, 1511 Massachusetts avenue.

The bureau was discontinued two years ago on orders from the Harvard law school faculty because of legal complications. At the request of hundreds of Cambridge's needy, the bureau was reopened.

$20,000 Bail Set in Roxbury Breaks

Charged with attempting to break into the Roxbury Cafe and possession of burglars' tools, James Regan of Brooks street, Brighton, and Ernest Rogers of Sabin street, Roxbury, were held in $10,000 each for the grand jury in Roxbury court today. They pleaded not guilty.

Patrolman Walter Hallett stated he arrested them after a screen had been removed from one of the windows of the restaurant, which is at 2141 Washington street, Roxbury.

FLYING BOATS SPAN ATLANTIC IN TESTS

GREETING BY DE VALERA

A large crowd, headed by President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State, greeted the Americans.

Gray termed the flight a "pleasant, enjoyable trip." He added the worst part of the flight came when the plane encountered rain clouds upon approaching Ireland.

The 13-ton, four engined Caledonia completed her hop ahead of schedule in charge of Captain A. S. Wilkinson and a crew of four. He had estimated the Caledonia would make the crossing in from 16 to 17 hours.

Spectators cheered loudly as the big plane dropped out of the skies to an easy landing. The plane will fly to Montreal Thursday and then on to Port Washington, N. Y., the last lap of the flight.

CLIPPER HITS 158 MPH

The Clipper's average speed was 156 miles per hour, the Caledonia's 132.

The twin airways put Great Britain and the United States first in the field in this year's projected experimental flights over the North Atlantic by aviation interests of four nations. France and Germany are preparing for similar excursions.

The rendezvous had been practically hunted from view of the incoming ship by a swirling mist. By a stroke of luck, rain clouds cleared away and the Clipper, a silvery figure beneath the black clouds, flew over Monument Hill to journey's end.

LANDS ON SHANNON

A huge burst of cheering almost drowned out the noise of the engines as the Clipper circled Foynes island. Then she reduced her speed and made a graceful, smooth landing where the river Shannon flows.

A brisk tail wind had speeded the Americans on the inaugural flight of what Pan-American Airways hopes will be America's bid for first place in a regular passenger and cargo service across the Atlantic by air.

The huge flying boat settled down within 50 yards of her moorings.

Captain Gray was smiling happily as he came ashore to receive the warm greetings of President Eamon DeValera of the Irish Free State; Sean Lemass, minister of commerce and industry, and officials of the British air ministry and Imperial Airways.

CREW, DE VALERA CHAT

The crowd good-naturedly heckled when the customs officer boarded the clipper to inspect luggage. His formal report said "no contraband."

The clipper crew, wearing sou'westers over their uniforms, stood talking to De Valera in a driving rain. Although they long had been sleepless, they presented a smart appearance. All had shaved before landing.

"We always do that," Gray explained. "It's just as easy as on a train."

Gray, speaking through a microphone, told his quayside audience the flight "was a rather small hop compared with the Pacific runs we have been making for two years —so twelve hours more or less is just a nice little joy ride."

"We had a glorious night," he continued, "and for the first time in my life I saw the Arctic light on the horizon the whole night long. It also was the longest expanse of unbroken clouds that I've ever seen.

DINNER AT SEA

"We were flying at times at 10,000 feet and although there were clouds beneath us we had the sun shining brightly nearly all the way after daybreak.

"We had a very nice dinner last night consisting of celery, olives, soup, salads, steak, and strawberries and cream. No, we did not finish up with liqueurs and cigars."

Viscount Swinton, British secretary of air, cabled congratulations from London both to the Clipper and the Caledonia at Botwood.

CALEDONIA LANDS

The throng of spectators cheered lustily when the silvery hull of the flying boat slipped into the calm blue waters of Botwood Harbor. Besides Captain Wilcockson, the Caledonia carried a crew of four.

A brilliant sun broke through the overnight haze as the Caledonia roared in from the seas and wheeled over Botwood, outpost in a pioneering that in a few months might bring timetable shuttling of the north Atlantic.

The flying boat straightened out over the river, heading downstream into a light wind and set down perfectly five minutes after first appearing over the town. She turned slowly and taxied toward the landing float.

After final tests have been made and a non-passenger mail service has been flown successfully, the first transatlantic passenger line on regular schedules will be established. Officials have predicted this might be possible by next spring.

Greets Fliers in Gaelic

Foynes, Irish Free State, July 6 (AP)—President Eamond De Valera welcomed the crew of the Clipper III in Gaelic today, telling the American trans-Atlantic fliers it was "the equivalent of a hundred thousand welcomes."

The flight, De Valera said at a luncheon in the docking shed, "means a great deal to Irishmen, for it brings America, where so many Irishmen live, very near to us. We all hope in a very short time there will be regular service."

SENATE COURT FIGHT OPENS

take the judiciary legislation up for consideration.

The Democratic leader next moved to substitute for the original bill, submitted by President Roosevelt, the compromise informally introduced last week.

The substitute would provide for appointment of new justices at the rate of one a year, to supplement those serving past 75 years of age.

REFUSES TO ADJOURN

Before making this motion, the Arkansan had served notice he would use every means available to break any filibuster and to force a vote.

REFUSES TO ADJOURN

The Arkansan also served notice that in view of threats from opponents to filibuster, he would not agree to adjourn tomorrow for the all-star baseball game between the American and National Leagues.

McNary asked if Robinson planned to continue with the court debate without consideration of other legislation.

Robinson replied that he would not object to consideration of pressing emergency legislation, but would reserve the freedom of action in view of the filibuster threats.

READY TO FIGHT

"If a filibuster develops, as threatened by the opponents of this legislation," the majority leader said, "I shall take the action prompted by the circumstances.

"It is my intention to have the Senate sit tomorrow. There is no justification for unduly prolonging business under these circumstances to permit members to attend a ball game.

"Considering that it has been heralded from one end of the land to the other that opponents intend to obstruct the business of the Senate, I announce my intention to keep this bill before the Senate until it is disposed of."

FRANCO ASKING FOR NEW AID

By the Associated Press

The Spanish government news agency, Agence Espagne, declared today that Insurgent General Francisco Franco had asked the Italian and German governments for 125,000 troops to aid in a new offensive against Madrid.

In a purported secret memorandum addressed to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini, Franco was said to have also requested 600 airplanes, 50 artillery batteries and tanks. The agency did not say whether it obtained the memorandum.

Rumors rose in the Paris foreign office in Paris today predicted Great Britain and France might agree to give the Spanish insurgents "limited" belligerent rights in return for full Italo-German cooperation in a "hands-off-Spain" sea patrol.

Such rights would give Franco's stronger fleet the privilege of blockading government ports and control of shipping, government or foreign, within the blockade limit.

In London, the British cabinet was reported to have determined on a compromise course of neutral observers in Spain to preserve some semblance of the non-intervention scheme.

HOLDUP NETS $15,000

bandits herded the manager, two other employes and two customers into the office of Sam's Restaurant at the shore end of Nantasket's steamboat landing, tied up the five men, stripped two of them of their trousers—and escaped with week-end receipts from four restaurants of the Sam's chain.

The manager, Samuel Cohen of Garland road, Newton Center, set his loss at $15,000 and added that his burglary and holdup insurance had expired July 1.

Manager Albert M. Brickman at first told police he believed about $3000 had been in the safe, but said later he did not know receipts from the other restaurants had been placed in there also.

PLACED THERE BY COHEN

Cohen said he himself had placed in the safe the receipts from his restaurants in Nantasket avenue, Nantasket, only 200 yards from the holdup scene, in Hingham, and on Weston boulevard, because the money from all these places is usually collected from the cafe held up today.

When Brickman arrived at the restaurant, two other employes and four customers were in the place, he told police.

The two employes, Charles Andrews and Carl Kille, followed Brickman into the office, the safe was opened, a bag of money taken out, the safe closed, and counting of the money was begun in preparation for the collector.

Within a few minutes, two of the customers, Fireman Herbert Seaver, 55, of New York and Oiler Richard Rowe, 20, of Hingham, members of the crew of the Nantasket steamboat Town of Hull, walked into the office at the points of pistols held by the other two men who had been in the dining room.

"This is a holdup," said the elder of the two bandits, a swarthy man about 30 years old and with a small mustache. Take it easy, you guys."

The hands of all except Brickman were tied, the bandits using picture wire they had brought with them, and snipping the wire with cutters.

Then, turning to Brickman, the elder bandit ordered:

"Open that safe, and do it the first time—you with the light suit—or I'll drill you."

Brickman stepped to the safe and opened it, the bandit scooping out the money and adding it to that on the table.

TROUSERS REMOVED

Then Brickman's hands were bound in front of him with wire and the bandits stripped off the trousers of Seafers and Rowe. Instead of stripping the other three men, the holdup pair turned and walked out to a small, dark sedan, loitered it and sped away toward Boston.

The five men in the office shouted for help attracting the chef who released their hands.

Brickman ran to the Metropolitan police station, 50 yards distant, and reported the holdup to Patrolman John J. Dunn.

Patrolman Dunn ordered radio and teletype alarms sent out, then followed up by telephone calls to police of Boston, Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Cohasset, as well as to the state troopers' barracks at Norwell.

Radio cars were sent out from these places to block all roads leading from Nantasket, and on a chance that the holdup men might be wily and take to a boat, the Coast Guard was also notified.

Meanwhile, however, Hull town police were in confusion and more than an hour after the holdup said they were unable to give details, although the restaurant is in their jurisdiction.

Belief that someone must have known his habit of concentrating receipts at the Nantasket restaurant for regular collections was expressed by Cohen.

Today's holdup was the fourth the Sam's restaurants have suffered in the past few years. Four years ago, when the Nantasket spot was first opened, the watchman was held up and a small amount of money taken.

Another holdup was at his Wollaston boulevard restaurant, where the bandits also stripped a $7000 diamond ring from the finger of the owner's wife, Mrs. Olga Cohen.

Wife Who Wanted a Job Asks Divorce

Salem, July 6—A North Shore couple whose home broke up after three months of wedded life, headed for divorce today when 20-year-old Mrs. Dorothy K. Chalifaux of Marblehead brought suit against her husband, Arnold, 23 years old. Her husband struck her when, after living together three months, she asked his permission to get a job, Mrs. Chalifaux said.

They were married August 22, 1936, and separated November 18 of the same year.

Five other uncontested divorce petitions were heard in probate court before Judge Harry R. Dowd.

Parker said they were married July 9, 1928, and his wife deserted him October 16, 1933, leaving their three children, "because she didn't want to be tied down with a family."

Mrs. Alice Nelson, Lynn, secured freedom from Arthur R. Nelson, alleging that her back was always bruised from her husband's kicking her.

Testifying that her husband, Albert J. Letourneau, gardener on the luxurious Crowninshield estate at Marblehead, entertained a lady friend at their home until 3 a. m., Mrs. Bessie H. Letourneau received a decree.

Other divorces were granted to Mrs. Mabel G. Hamilton, Curtis street, Cliftondale, from her husband, George G., on grounds of desertion, and to Mrs. Lila B. Tuxbury, Marblehead, from her husband, William C. Tuxbury, charging her husband sought to dodge the responsibility of being a married man.

Boxer Cabana Held for Pa. Police in $7200 Robbery

George Bowan, Chelsea Negro who fights in the welterweight division under the name, George Cabana, was taken into custody today by police as he was about to begin service as a member of the Suffolk grand jury.

He was taken to headquarters by Detectives William Bonner and Joseph McGovern to await the arrival of a warrant from Pennsylvania.

According to Bonner, Bowan and four or five other Greater Boston men were connected with a $7200 holdup at the Lucius Beebe Leather Co., Bristol, Pa., April 9.

Bowan denied it, declaring he was employed as a doorman at a Chelsea Club.

"I never carried a gun in my life," he said. "If there has been any confession, I don't know what they're talking about."

Bonner received information a week ago that a Boston group had been implicated in a Pennsylvania holdup and got in touch with the Bristol police and later sent photographs.

He said the police notified him that as a result of identifications of these pictures they would send warrants for four men, including Jervis Jennings, who was brought back to Boston June 28 from New York by state troopers on the shooting of Patrolman Thomas G. Supple of Dorchester.

Last night Bonner was informed that Edward Volget of Chelsea had been arrested in Philadelphia and had allegedly stated that he "fingered" the Beebe factory to the gang on information obtained from "a man named Cabana."

According to Bonner, the Pennsylvania authorities, in addition to Jennings, want George F. Hogan of Revere, who was sentenced to nine to ten years in Connecticut state prison last month for the shooting of Walter Miller of Chelsea.

Another whom they want, the detective said, is Arthur A. Demer, who was sentenced to three to five years in state prison last month for a Nantasket case in which Miller was also sentenced.

Keep Cool With "SALADA" ICED TEA

TRIPLE SLAYER FACES QUICK INDICTMENT

Los Angeles, July 6 (US)—While his wife, Isabel, tearfully protested the innocence of Albert Dyer, WPA worker, who allegedly confessed the fiend murder of three little Inglewood girls, two of whom formerly resided in Dorchester, Mass., District Attorney Buron Fitts prepared today to seek murder indictments.

Cringing and whimpering in his cell, where guards watched him to prevent an attempt at suicide, Dyer shrieked:

"Don't let them take me out of here! Don't let them take me back to Inglewood. They'll tear me to pieces."

Dyer believes he can escape the noose by pleading guilty to the sex murders of the three little girls, he declared.

KISSED DEAD FACES

"If I plead guilty, all they can give me is life and I can go to San Quentin prison and do barbering work."

Dyer was quoted as saying:

"I knelt down and kissed their faces after I had killed and assaulted him.

"I led them down the ravine. They knew me and had faith in me. As I led them, I took their shoes and placed them in a neat row like they were found. Then I knelt and prayed over the shoes."

District Attorney Fitts announced:

"Dyer has convinced me he is telling the truth. I'll take the case before the grand jury. His story will be corroborated by evidence from other sources."

NOTABLES AT COUSEN'S RITES

Educators, college trustees, alumni, faculty and students today attended funeral services for Dr. John A. Cousens, 62, president of Tufts College for 18 years, in Goddard Chapel on the college campus, Medford.

Dr. Cousens died suddenly last Friday following a heart attack at his home, Suffolk road, Brookline.

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, headed the list of honorary pall bearers. Also serving with Dr. Lowell were members of the board of trustees, college officials and alumni who were graduated in the same class of 1896 with Dr. Cousens.

Others were Dean Harry P. Burden of the engineering school; Dean Charles Gott of the graduate school, Dean Hanford L. Hoskins of the Fletcher school of law and diplomacy, Dean Leon M. Murjerson of the dental school, and Frederick Crabtree and Stephen Hodges, both nephews of Dr. Cousens.

Dr. Lee S. McCollester, dean emeritus of the Tufts Theological school, officiated at the services assisted by Dr. Clarence R. Skinner, dean of the theological school, and Dr. Frank O. Hall, pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York city.

Music arrangements were by Prof. Leo R. Lewis, head of the Tufts music department, and organists were Dr. Palmer B. Wingate and Paul F. Stanton.

Interment, which was private, was in Walnut Hill cemetery, Brookline.

Dr. Cousens is survived by the former Elizabeth Frances Edward, whom he married in 1906.

FACES TRIAL IN SHIP FIRE

All the way from Africa, the freighter West Lashaway is bringing Edward Brennan, a member of the crew, to Boston to stand trial for allegedly trying to burn the ship in the Congo river last month.

This was disclosed today by U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford who received notice of the case from Thomas A. Hickok, U. S. consul at Lagos, Nigeria, West Africa.

The consul's letter, coming via London, beat the freighter here by five days. The West Lashaway is due July 10. Brennan is being held in the ship's brig under constant guard.

According to Captain Arthur W. Phillips of the freighter, who made a statement to Consul Hickok, Brennan piled the ship's official papers against a door and set fire to them.

Damon Runyon

Dr. Robert N. McMurry, a Chicago psychologist, says that a man who cries "Kill the umpire" at a baseball game may be "a psychoped." The good doctor explains that "a psychoped" is an adult who has the emotional attitude, under certain conditions, of a child. The word is said to be of Greek coinage.

Dr. McMurry states that it is not a bad thing to be "a psychoped." He says that, when "a psychoped" vents his rage at an opposing ball player, or the umpire, he may go home and relax. He adds that in general these principal factors contribute to enjoyment of any sport as a spectator, as follows:

(A) The possibility of identifying one's self with the players. (B) The opportunity for vicarious participation in the actual play. (C) The chance to release repressed aggression.

It is the latter principle, he says, that makes for those violent outbursts of the "psychoped." He claims that an individual who would never think of threatening to kill an umpire, or use a wrestler to break his opponent's neck, if he were alone, becomes so stimulated by the presence of a mob that he becomes the victim of a sort of psychological intoxication somewhat similar to that produced by alcohol, which results in a partial or complete breakdown of any or all inhibitory mechanisms.

BROOKLYN SYMPTOMS

It all sounds very interesting and scientific, but we fear Dr. McMurray has been confining his studies to a special type of baseball fan—perhaps the Chicago fan. The Chicago baseball fan may be "a psychoped," all right, and subject to psychological explanation, but we would like to know what the doctor would do about the Brooklyn baseball fan. We do not believe that the Brooklyn baseball fan can be diagnosed or explained by psychology or anything else.

Only this past Sunday we had the opportunity of studying a magnificent specimen of the Brooklyn baseball fan at length, and in no detail did he answer Dr. McMurray's description of "a psychoped." He was a powerful looking Brooklyn baseball fan who was present with us at the Polo Grounds to observe a baseball game between the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

For five or six innings it was a spread for the Dodgers behind the superfine pitching of Mr. Van Lingle Mungo, a right nice right-hander. During this period the Brooklyn baseball fan sat quiet, merely regretting occasionally that he had not canvassed the lads back of third base for a bet on his home team.

LUSTS TO KILL

Then Mr. Van Lingle Mungo seemed to fall apart under a pelting by the Giants, and a hot bounder across first base destroyed a noble lead for the Dodgers, some of whom thought that the drive was foul, and that Mr. William Klem, the umpire at first, erred in his judgment that the ball was fair.

These doubting Dodgers clustered about the umpire muttering fiercely in his ears, and it was then that the Brooklyn baseball fan remarked, not lifting his voice in the slightest degree:

"I could murder Mr. Klem."

"I could strangle Mr. Klem with my own hands," he said, quietly. "I could burn him at the stake. I despise him."

There was no violent outburst of repressed aggressions here. No psychological intoxication, stimulated by the presence of a mob. There were other Brooklyn baseball fans in the Polo Grounds, to be sure, but they were making no riotous demonstration over Mr. Klem's decision. They were merely muttering in a low, sinister key. We could not distinguish their words.

NO RELAXING HERE

We called up later, hoping that our Brooklyn baseball fan was merely one of Dr. McMurry's "psychoped," and would be fully relaxed at home, as the doctor says is characteristic of the "psychoped."

"Hello," said the Brooklyn baseball fan quietly in response to our cheery hail. "I am sitting here reading a book on the Spanish Inquisition and thinking how nice it would have been for Mr. Klem."

Busy Day in Courts After Holiday

4 HELD IN $5000 IN DORCHESTER GIRL ATTACK

The day after the holiday was a busy one today for Greater Boston courts. The hand of the law reached out for four members of one family, arrested in connection with a $65 theft. Three Dorchester youths and a Roxbury man were held as alleged attackers of a 14-year-old girl. And the troubled romance of Mrs. Helen Murphy, 14-year-old Dorchester bride, was further complicated by arraignment of her husband, Joseph L. Murphy, 20, on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

Charged with attack on a 14-year-old Dorchester girl, four men pleaded not guilty in Dorchester court today and were held in $5000 each for the grand jury.

Three of the defendants were 17-year-old Dorchester youths. They were dward A. Perkins, of Alexander street; Edward M. Gill, of Moseley street; and Calvin H. Wilbur, also of Moseley street.

The fourth was John J. Curtis 38, father of eight children, of Moreland street, Roxbury.

According to police, the three youths were arrested shortly after the girl victim staggered into Columbia station, South Boston, and related her experience in the Elevated cashier who called police.

Police searching the area near the field off Mile road, Dorchester, where the alleged attack occurred, arrested the three youths in the Strandway Stadium, South Boston.

At City hospital, police said the girl identified the four as her assailants.

Curtis, watchman of a South Boston firm, denied the attack, stating he drove the three youths and the girl away from the premises, located near the scene of the alleged attack.

DETECTIVE BATES HAROLD DOCKERY JOSEPH DOCKERY WILLIAM DOCKERY MRS. DOCKERY

All four members of this Roxbury family, shown in custody of Detective Roy Bates of the Back Bay police station, were held today in connection with the theft of a suit and watch, valued at $65. While the sons, Harold, 16, and Joseph, 19, were being arraigned in municipal court, charged with larceny, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Dockery of Burbank street, Roxbury, were before Roxbury district court, charged with receiving the allegedly stolen articles. Their case was continued until tomorrow.

EDWARD M. GILL CALVIN H WILBUR EDWARD A. PERKINS JOHN J. CURTIS

Held in $5000 each today, charged with criminally attacking a 14-year-old Dorchester girl, were these four defendants: Edward M. Gill, 17, Calvin H. Wilbur, 17, Edward A. Perkins, 17, and John J. Curtis, 38, of Roxbury. They were arrested in South Boston after the girl victim had told her story. The picture was made at police headquarters. In the circle is a police officer's hand, grasping Curtis' arm.

Girl Bride, 14, Sees Husband Held in Theft

While his 14-year-old bride sat in Dorchester court watching proceedings, Joseph L. Murphy, 20, was held in $5000 bail today on a charge of breaking and entering and stealing $68.50 from a variety store.

Police told Judge Sadie R. Shulman that the break took place at the store of Walter R. Thomas in Bowdoin street, Dorchester, two nights before Murphy and the girl Helen Jordan, eloped to Seabrook N. H., March 21.

The young bridegroom waived examination and submitted no plea as Judge Shulman ordered him held for the grand jury.

Unable to provide bail, Murphy was taken to Charles Street Jail.

His child bride, accompanied by her mother, walked mournfully out of the courtroom at the conclusion of the case, then told reporters:

"I don't believe Joe ever did any such thing. He is a good boy, and while I don't know how whether I will go back to him or not, I still love him and believe he is innocent."

Murphy was arrested Sunday and held for questioning over the holiday. His arrest came just as he and his child bride had been reconciled after a fortnight's estrangement. Instead of breaking them up again, it brought her closer to him.

Parents Held in $2000 As Sons Also Face Court

While their two sons were taken to municipal court for arraignment in connection with the same case, Mr. and Mrs. William Dockery of Burbank street, Roxbury, were arraigned in Roxbury court today and held in $2000 bail.

They were charged with receiving a suit and watch, allegedly stolen by their sons. Another charge against them was unlawful possession of a hypodermic syringe and needle. They pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until tomorrow for hearing.

The two sons, Harold, 16, and Joseph, 19, are charged with stealing the suit and watch, valued at $65, from Frank Harney of Beacon street, Back Bay.

Roosevelt to Edit His Writings of Last Decade

Washington, July 6 (AP)—Development of President Roosevelt's social and economic philosophy through the past decade will be traced in five volumes of his public papers, to be published early next spring, White House officials announced today.

The President has completed arrangements with Random House, it was announced, to publish the volumes, containing public papers, messages, proclamations and speeches covering the period from his first campaign for governor of New York in 1928 to his second presidential inauguration.

The President will complete the volumes, including introduction and explanatory notes, during the summer, with the help of Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York State supreme court, who was his counsel when he was governor.

Methuen Cottage Razed by Flames

Methuen, July 6—Fire today completely destroyed a four-room cottage on Cuddy avenue. Firemen were handicapped by low pressure and lack of water.

Hosea Kaidy, 14, in the house at the time, and one brother, Joseph, 12, at work in the garden, ran more than half a mile to sound the alarm. The blaze was believed to have been caused, according to fire officials, by a defective chimney.

Berlin, July 6 (INS)—President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine Islands and his party arrived here today. They were greeted by officials of the German foreign office and the United States embassy.

JOSEPH L. MURPHY SPECIAL OFFICER BRABAZON

MRS. HELEN MURPHY

While his 14-year-old wife, Mrs. Helen Murphy (in inset), looked sadly on, Joseph L. Murphy, 20, was held in $5000 bail today, in Dorchester court, on charges of breaking and entering and larceny. He's shown here in custody of Special Officer Edward R. Brabazon. "I don't believe Joe did it," the child bride said loyally.

LIMERICK GIVES DE VALERA EDGE

Dublin, Irish Free State, July 6 (AP)—County Limerick, sprang a last-minute election surprise early today and pushed President Eamon De Valera's slim government majority in the Dail to four.

The district's votes in last Thursday's parliamentary and constitutional elections returned four De Valera deputies and two supporting opposition leader William T. Cosgrave. An even division had been expected.

The government, with eight seats still to be tabulated, holds 67, the Cosgrave opposition, 41, Labor 11, and Independents 8.

The latest count on the proposed new constitution, which would sever the Free State's last links with the British Crown, was 314,080 for, and 404,661 against.

Swedish Prince Weds for Love

Stockholm, July 6 (AP)—Prince Charles of Sweden sacrificed any chance of inheriting the throne today. He married Countess Elsa von Rosen, a commoner.

The nephew of King Gustaf of Sweden and brother of the late Queen Astrid of the Belgians lost his title and prerogatives in the Swedish royal family, becoming by royal decree Prince Charles Bernadotte, and his bride, daughter of the Swedish court master of ceremonies, Princess Elsa.

The new princess, seven years older than her 26-year-old husband, was divorced in 1935 from M. Aglen von Rosen. She has three children.

South Shore Players' Premiere Attracts Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

DEMI-TASSE and cigars evidently take longer after a dinner of salmon and peas than after some other entree . . . or maybe it was just the holiday spirit. . . . At any rate, both the actors and the audience lingered so long over their dinner tables that the raising of the first curtain . . . which marked the opening of a new summer theatrical season for the South Shore Players, as well as the first night of "Most of the Game," at Cohasset . . . was delayed some twenty or thirty minutes . . .

MRS. ARSENE de R. LLOYD

Most everyone who had read the previous announcements that Peter Arno, the well known satirical cartoonist, was cast as the leading man in the play, had never heard that he had any interest in the theater . . . and suspected that his famous name was being used merely to attract the many who enjoy his cartoons . . . but Arno turned out to be just as satirical and amusing on the stage as he is on paper . . . and his performance was a delightful and refreshing climax to the holiday festivities along the South Shore . . .

Before coming to the theater, Mr. Arno was the guest of honor at dinner at the Black Horse Inn in Hingham where some of his companions included Philip Holmes, the Hollywood star who plays the lead in next week's production. Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Prouty of Hingham and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Dean . . Mrs. Prouty's gown of sheer black chiffon and lace was brightened with a corsage of brilliant poppies at the neckline and Mrs. Dean chose a gown of turquoise moire with a full skirt and puff sleeves . . .

After spending most of the week-end in bathing suits and rough and tumble sports togs, a great many of the girls in the audience took advantage of the opportunity to wear feminine evening frocks . . . Mrs. Robert C. Knowles' royal blue chiffon had a deep cape of the same fabric edged with a narrow pleated band of yellow velvet . . . Mrs. Charles Jones of Cohasset looked as cool as a lime freeze in a frock of pale green striped organza with a short jacket of a deeper shade and Mrs. William Emerson Barrett's gown of dubonnet and white flowered print had becoming bands of solid color around the neck and hem . . .

Many First-Nighters Attend

Lockwood-Batchelder Ceremony

BARBARA BATCHELDER, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hollis G. Batchelder of Dedham, becomes the bride of John Marshall Lockwood, son of Justice and Mrs. Charles C. Lockwood, this afternoon . . . The Rev. Thomas Huntington Chapell is performing the ceremony at 4:30 in St. Paul's Church in Dedham . . . After the church service the guests will drive out to the reception at the Dedham Country and Polo Club . . .

The bridal gown is of white lace with a short tulle veil caught to a lace cap . . . She is carrying a bouquet of bouvardia . . . The wedding is an "all-white" affair, for the bridal attendants also wear white . . . Mrs. Richard Walcott (Penelope Warren) of Dedham, who is the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Katherine Johnson and Mrs. Louis Munro of Cohasset and Mrs. Wallace M. Scudder, Jr., and Mrs. DeRosset Lloyd of Boston, are wearing dresses of white net with white shoes and large white hats . . . They are carrying bouquets of delphinium and bachelor buttons . . .

Spalding McCabe of Albany is Mr. Lockwood's best man and the ushers include John Dean of Cohasset and New York, John Madden of Boston, Edward LeB. Marshall of Westwood, William P. Blanc of New York, William H. Gibson of Hamilton, Bermuda; Lindsley Loring, Jr., of Westwood, James S. Angier of New Haven and Hollis G. Batchelder of Dedham, brother of the bride . . .

Mrs. Batchelder, mother of the bride, is wearing a navy chiffon gown and a large white hat—Mrs. Lockwood, mother of the bridegroom, has chosen hydrangea blue chiffon . . and when the bride and bridegroom leave the reception, bound for a secret honeymoon destination which they have hinted is California, the bride will wear a "going away" suit of a black skirt and cape, and a black and white printed blouse of the same material as the lining of the cape . . A large black hat will complete the outfit . . .

Martha Seaver Bowditch to Wed

DR. AND MRS. HAROLD BOWDITCH chose the holiday as the occasion for announcing the engagement of their daughter, Martha Seaver Bowditch, to Douglas William Alden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alanson G. Alden of Union, New Jersey . . .

The prospective bride is a graduate of Wellesley College in 1933 and made her debut in the season of 1930-31 . . . She is a neice of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Bowditch of Concord and a cousin of E. Francis Bowditch of Milton . . .

NEWTONVILLE Girl Bride of Albany Man

Powers-Herrick Bridal In Newtonville Church

White calla lilies and palms banked the sanctuary of St. Bernard's church in Newtonville for the ten o'clock ceremony at which Mary Herrick, daughter of Henry Herrick, became the bride of Paul Powers of Albany, N. Y.

No less than twelve bridesmaids attended her. Her sister, Dorothea, in a diaphanous frock of tropical green taffeta, face veil of the same shade and a bouquet of gerbia served as her maid of honor.

Costumed in varying tints of blue were the remaining ten attendants. Their dainty ruffled frocks of white were worn beneath jackets of turquoise blue. Old-fashioned bouquets of spring flowers and veils of blue completed their costumes.

In the group were Mrs. Henry Lyall, Jr. of Lynn Brook, L. I., cousin of the bride, Mrs. John O'Neill of Cambridge, Ruth Mahoney of Dorchester, Anne McLaughlin of Worcester, Mrs. John J. Glavin of Londonville, N. Y., Mary McKenna of Pittsburgh, Hilda Moorman of Cincinnati, Wilhelmina Connelly of Fall River, Mrs. John Graham of Pawtucket and Mrs. Henry Fitzpatrick of Belmont.

Donald Powers of Albany, N. Y., was best man. Ushering at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride, were John Herrick, Henry Lyall, Jr. of Lynnbrook, John Murray and Dr. Harry V. Judge of Albany, N. Y., cousins of the groom, and Dr. William J. Sennet of Albany, N. Y.

Also seating guests at the "al fresco" breakfast were John J. Glavin of Londonville, James D. Kennedy, Jr., of Cambridge, Harold Turner of Everett, John J. O'Neill of Cambridge, and Frank J. Lang of Niagara, N. Y.

Mrs. Powers was educated at Sacred Heart in Providence and Trinity College in Washington. Mr. Powers is a graduate of Holy Cross College and Harvard Law School. He is the son of Mrs. James H. Powers of Albany, N. Y. and is connected with the Court of Appeals of the State of New York.

Cambridge Bridal

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Alexander Duncan have announced the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Isabel Duncan Dole of Everett street, Cambridge, to Arthur Franklin Blanchard, son of Mrs. Emma J. Whitman Blanchard of Cambridge and the late Marshall F. Blanchard.

The ceremony was performed in the First Parish Church in Cambridge Friday afternoon, July 2. The Rev. Harry W. Foote officiated and only members of the immediate families attended.

Mr. Blanchard is state senator from the Second Middlesex District. He graduated from Harvard College in 1904 and is a member of the Harvard Faculty Club, the Authors' League of New York and the Society of Mayflower descendants.

Society Notes

MR. AND MRS. KENNETH SHAW SAFE spent the holiday at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. W. Lewis, and Mr. and Mrs. George Plimpton of Cambridge were the week-end house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher LaFarge at Narragansett.

Garden Tour On Cape

The lovely sunken garden of the estate of Mrs. Seward Prosser in Woods Hole is one of the attractive private gardens which will be opened to the public on Wednesday afternoon, July 7, for the benefit of the Cape Cod Branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Mrs. Prosser's estate is one of four which will be opened to public view for the first time. These four are located on Penzance point, one of the most picturesque spots on the Cape.

Mrs. Albert A. Tilney will open her naturalistic garden which extends to the water's edge. The rock garden of the estate of Mrs. Franklin A. Park, and the perfusion of roses and delphinium on Mrs. Geoffrey T. Whitney's estate may also be seen. A va wall protects Mrs. Mary C. Draper's sunken garden which is built on a peninsula jutting out into the harbor, and Mrs. Arthur W. Bell's rose garden will also be exhibited.

Dorchester Girl Scouts Honored

Girl Scout troops of St. Ambrose's Parish, Dorchester, were signally honored in the award from national headquarters of the Golden Eaglet emblem, highest honor in scouting, to six of their members simultaneously.

The recipients were Marguerite Frazier, Martha Galian, Winifred Gallant, Mary Garvey, Dorothy McAuliffe and Mary Moran.

Lucille O'Malley Becomes Bride In Brilliant Cohasset Wedding

HOLIDAY Bride In Cohasset Ceremony

Attendants Dressed Alike

A bright July sun filtered through the stained glass windows of St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset, yesterday, making the tiny edifice a spot of unsurpassed loveliness for the nuptials at which Lucille O'Malley, daughter of Charles F. O'Malley, became the bride of Maurice McLoughlin of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Rev. Daniel J. Lynch, S. J., treasurer of Boston College and spiritual advisor of the Junior Philomathia, of which Lucille was first president, performed the eleven o'clock ceremony. Rt. Rev. James E. Cassidy, bishop of Fall River, headed the group of clergyman assisting. Also seated within the sanctuary were Rev. John F. Madden, pastor of St. Anthony's Church, and Rev. F. X. Salloway.

WEDS IN WHITE

It was a white wedding, unusually dainty and attractive in its execution.

Lucille's frock of white net was fashioned on dirndl lines, its basque slim and well-fitting, its skirt voluminous. Her tulle veil fell from a cap of Brussels lace which also formed the wide insert in her veil. An emerald lavaliere in an old gold and pearl setting and a white satin-bound prayer book completed the bride's ensemble.

The quartet of attractive attendants were dressed alike. With their frocks of white lace they wore tiny face veils—three carnations holding them in place. Josephine Moore from Kansas City, a cousin of the bride, led the procession carnations of the palest pink nestling on her veil. Marie Celeste, the bride's youngest sister, followed with flowers of a deeper shade trimming her headdress and forming her arm bouquet of carnations and baby breath.

Rosalie Meyers wore a vivid pink shade Grace Genevieve's were of darkest maroon for her role as honor attendant.

RECEPTION AT SUMMER HOME

Over five hundred guests gathered at Grey Ledges, the O'Malley summer home on Jerus road. Lines of covered tables and gay garden furniture dotted the spacious estate for the gay reception to the bridal pair.

Mrs. Maurice McLoughlin, mother of the groom, was attractively outfitted in flowered chiffon. Lending fashioning her pale shade hat, Mrs. Genevieve Moore, aunt of the bride, assisted in receiving guests. Her ankle-length gown of blue taffet sported a yoke of embroidered batiste and stripe of white flowers formed the crown of her large taffeta picture hat.

Mayor and Mrs. Frederick W. Mansfield and former Governor and Mrs. James M. Curley headed the list of distinguished guests. Mrs. Mansfield chose pink lace with a wide-brimmed hat of white horsehair. Mrs. Curley wore her own wedding gifts, a pendant and ear rings of jade and pearl, with her costume of shell pink wool.

It was either Jack Marshard's band or the flowing punch bowl which attracted most of the younger set. Pat Gavin and Patricia Maher shared equally in Austen Philbin's attentions. Pat colorfully gowned in an accordion pleated number of printed crepe the latter in navy with polka-dot trim.

AMONG GUESTS

Marie O'Connell and her escort sat on the floor for comfort. Marie oblivious to the effectiveness of her chalk-white sports suit smartly trimmed with navy. Katherine Donnelly chose pink and white lawn. Rose Fitzgerald, whose engagement to Dr. Hugh Donohue was recently announced, chose a distinctive frock of white appliqued with red flowers. Her parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Fitzgerald, and her sister, Mary, in a fussy frock of baby blue, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crosby and their three daughters, Helene, Elinor and Betty. Mrs. G. Frank Sullivan in a brightly printed cape ensemble was accompanied by her daughter Marjorie, in a white crepe costume and her son, Gerard.

Among the young marrieds were Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Conny, who motored down from Portsmouth for the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. E. Corbett Walsh, the latter wearing a white costume smartly trimmed with navy, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Barry, Jr., who have taken a summer home at Nahant.

At present, the newly-marrieds are aboard Europa, bound on a six-week tour of the British Isles.

BASED ON THE COSMOPOLITAN FILM HIT

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Margery Morrison, a skilled stenographer, is so beautiful that she has difficulty in keeping jobs because her employers invariably try to get familiar. She always quits the job and keeps her self-respect. The only man who ever interested her she has seen but twice, and doesn't know his name. Learning that the Belden Publishing Co. hires only homely girls, Margery disguises herself as a painfully plain girl and gets a job. She is sent to be secretary to Freddy Matthews, a novelist who is so lazy that he has to be jogged continually. It turns out that this Freddy is that heretofore unknown and only man who ever interested Margery.

Now Continue:

CHAPTER XI

"Raining!" Margery exclaimed, in dismay. "Rain, eh?" Freddy drawled. "Thanks for telling me. I was wondering what caused this dampness."

Margery looked at him, slyly. If it wasn't that he had to get that novel finished, she thought, and there was nothing to worry about, he would be rather good fun as a companion.

"How about putting up the top?"

"Just one reason why I can't do that—I had the top taken off, it rattled. But I am prepared for emergencies."

He stopped the car produced an umbrella from a compartment in back. He opened it and handed it to her.

Margery looked at the umbrella and couldn't restrain a laugh. The covering was split and torn away in a dozen places.

"Moths!" Freddy said, grinning at her.

"What ho, Miss Morrison, can you swim?"

"Not in rain."

"Then we will duck for shelter."

THEY FIND A HAVEN

He took a turn up a shady road and parked at Morse Shoe Tavern. It was more of an oasis for equestrians than autoists, Freddy explained, and added, "Any port in a storm."

Quite a number of saddle horses were beneath a sheltering shed and their riders were gathered at some of the tables inside, or sitting at the bar. A large fireplace held a cheerful and warming blaze. Freddy piloted Margery over there. He did not see that among some of the girls sitting at the bar was Camille Lansing.

Margery tried to brush some of the water from her arms and shoulders as she stood by the fire.

"I am sorry about the rain, because—"

"But I didn't, and this delays your work—"

At this point Freddy, with his mind on a drink, looked toward the bar just as Camille turned and recognized him.

"Camille!" Freddy exclaimed and, without a word, left Margery standing by the fireplace while he hurried over to her. Darling: I'm glad I ran into you!"

"I am glad I ran into you," she replied, coldly, eying Margery's back. "Too bad I'm not a truck."

"Is THAT nice?" he accused.

"Did you expect me to greet you with a brass band after standing me up like this?"

"When did I stand you up?"

"You know when—yesterday. We had a luncheon date and I waited for you in front of the St. Francis Hotel until I felt like a part of the building!"

Freddy Matthews recalled, then, that she was right, but he dare not admit it.

FREDDY EXPLAINS

"As if I would do that to you, light of my life. It was your fault. You misunderstood. I said the Palace Hotel, and I waited and waited there for you."

"You did not, Freddy Matthews! I thought you might have said the Palace, so I had you paged and you weren't there! Now think up a better one!"

"Listen, darling," he said, rubbing his forehead, "I have been composing fiction all the forenoon."

"Who is the girl?" Camille asked.

Margery had turned about, and was watching them.

"What girl?" He saw where she was looking. "Oh, my new secretary, as Miss Morrison."

Camille laughed. "For once, I believe you. She couldn't be anything else but a secretary."

"Wise Abbey. She's the sort of girl to make you work, with no distractions."

"That's what's worrying me—that girl is a slave-driver. Say, how about having dinner with me, to make up for the broken luncheon date—"

"But your secretary?"

"I told her I'd drive it home, but I'll send her home in a taxi. She won't mind."

Camille followed Freddy over to the fireplace. He introduced her to Margery, who once more regretted that she had to be disguised so hideously.

"Miss Lansing," Freddy said, "has reminded me that I have a dinner date with her. Would you mind if I sent you home in a taxi?"

"Not at all," Margery answered, "providing it has a roof."

"Thanks. I'll find one with roof, steam heat and running hot and cold water."

IT WAS TOO MUCH

On the Tavern porch they looked about.

Margery was burning up. So little work had been done this first day and Miss Belden wouldn't like it. More than this, although Margery hated to admit it, even to herself, the presence of the petite and dashing little society girl, Camille Lansing, didn't add to her happiness.

"See you tomorrow," Freddy said, carelessly, as he helped her into the taxi.

"You will at nine," Margery assured him, "and you will make up for today's laziness!"

"Make it ten, early rising doesn't agree with me."

"Nine o'clock," Margery said, firmly.

Freddy gave the driver a bill. "The young lady will tell you where to go," he said and hurried back into the Tavern. Margery gave her address and leaned back, quite furious. The wig, having been wet in the rain, annoyed her, so she yanked it off, together with her fake spectacles, and leaned back.

Susie was home when Margery arrived. Her Boy Friend, Jake, was with her, as usual, practicing on the piano.

Margery told her everything that had happened. Susie was altogether too keen a girl not to be able to read between the lines. Margery wasn't half as sore because Freddy Matthews wouldn't do much work, as she was because he shipped her home to stay and dine and dance with the Lansing girl.

"Listen, Honey," Susie said, lowering her voice so that Jake might not hear, "you haven't gone and fallen hard for this guy, Matthews, have you?"

"Don't be silly," Margery said, evasively.

"You wouldn't have been if you wasn't disguised to look like a freak."

"But if I didn't work in disguise I wouldn't have the job."

"No, but honest, Marge, how can you expect this Matthews party to give you half a look in your rig? You ain't no Miss San Francisco in that, you know. You can't blame him."

"This rig got me my job. I don't care, anyway, except for the job."

Midsummer Night's Enchantment

LIKE THE FIGMENT of a dream, floating and elusive, and with all the glamour a summer girl could possibly want and make good use of—that's the highlight of this gown, modeled by Miss Florence Dysart. Fittingly dramatic as the last Fashion Congress selection of the summer season.

It's not the gown to wear when you jump from one gay night spot to another on the Cape, perhaps forty or fifty miles in each hop, or from one big house to another on the North Shore, with everyone snugly packed into one phaeton . . . that's for your cunning, inexpensive cottons. This is for the Big Nights in your summer—and, yes, probably in your life! Vionnet conceived the loveliness of the strapless decolletage, bound with black velvet ribbon, the black velvet ribbon around the waist, and the graduated tiers of shadowy black lace on the immense skirt. The color is lyrical in itself, and individual—lime yellow, starched chiffon. A summer debutante wearing it could never be forgotten . . .

Bridge

Hasty Trump Drawing

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Theoretically, aggressive bidding is a winning policy and one that is pursued by almost all experts.

Thus it is not a bit illogical to abandon "safety first" in favor of a fat reward.

It is illogical, however, for a player to employ this philosophy unless he is justified in thinking that he will be able to bring home "tough" contracts.

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♣
3 ◇	3 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
5 ◇	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

As the bidding progressed South became more and more sure that he would find North very short of spades. But of course this impression was crystallized by North's pass to five spades—with two losing spades North almost surely would have used a warning double.

West opened the heart Ace. Declarer ruffed and, in a frenzy to get out trumps, laid down the Ace and Queen. Only when East failed to follow to the second round did declarer wake up to the fact that he had put himself in a hopeless jam. What was he going to do with his losing spades?

To lead a spade at this point would do no good—West undoubtedly would win and continue with his remaining trump, nor would it avail to draw West's remaining trump and run the club suit, finally discarding dummy's lone spade. South would still have three spades and only one trump in dummy with which to ruff. The contract went down to inevitable defeat.

Disorders of Feet

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

No doubt you will be surprised to learn that nine out of every ten adults suffer from some form of foot defect.

But that is even more astonishing is that recent surveys reveal that 65 per cent of school boys and 80 per cent of school girls are victims of some foot disorder.

Bear in mind that at birth the foot of the child is usually as perfect as nature can make it. Yet, by the time the child is ready to go to school, the feet are often misshaped, showing bent toes and bone deformities. Such disturbances are often traced to ill-fitting shoes or stockings.

Remember that children's feet grow rapidly. In fact, in certain age groups, a full size or more in growth occurs within a single month or two.

Ten years must pass before the foot and its arches are fully formed, and it takes 20 years for a foot to complete its growth. Naturally the care given during early life will determine permanent foot health.

Children often suffer from red spots, blisters, corns and callouses, caused by thick, stiff, heavy or outgrown shoes. When proper attention is neglected, bunions, weak feet and weak ankles develop.

To prevent these evils, make sure that the child is furnished with cotton or wool stockings that are big enough, and with shoes that fit well, without restriction or chafing. A widely-known foot specialist once pointed out that the shoes of the child determine the feet of the adult.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Last Season's Clothes Tell Weight Tales

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

YOUR last summer's frock will tell where you have gained! Clothes are a much more reliable indication of what is happening to your figure than are the scales.

Since, on the screen, the tiniest surplus shows up as glaring overweight, Hollywood is the world's most weight-conscious colony. Marjorie Gateson, dashing sophisticate in the streamlined "Vogues of 1938," has to have a good figure for such a role.

Of all the actresses I met in Hollywood, Miss Gateson seemed most perfectly to combine the charm of maturity with the vitality of youth. Her figure program is so sane and healthful that it makes an excellent pattern for the woman past thirty.

"Inches are so much more important than pounds," says Miss Gateson. "As soon as your clothes get a little snug, start exercising. Instead of letting out seams, take a tuck in your measurements."

This is her credo: "Never let weight go up more than three pounds. Past three pounds the waistband tightens and seams feel the strain. That's when I get busy."

Miss Gateson's program is not strenuous, but it is regular. She makes a practice of walking up and down stairs whenever possible—the buildings don't grow so tall out in California. Instead of telephoning the grocer, she advises the housewife, walk to the store but have the bundles delivered so as not to interfere with the brisk walk home.

Like many of the other screen players, Miss Gateson likes to take her exercise out in fun. She plays tennis on the average of three times a week and always plays doubles, because that makes the game less strenuous.

Doing exercise at home is dull, this trim actress admits, but, as she says, a little goes a long way and ten-minutes stretching will keep the waistline right in its place. Miss Gateson always allows herself a bit of dumping sometime during the day. Then she relaxes completely. To keep on your toes constantly wastes your energy and puts lines in your face. "Be a jellyfish," she says, "for at least twenty minutes a day."

You have to have vitality to keep going at your best. Moderate exercise and a balanced diet are the best way for any woman to keep her measurements in trim.

Avoid drastic dieting, Miss Gateson would tell you, for it isn't smart to keep slim at the expense of your face.

Sour Cream Refrigerator Rolls

NOVELTIES FOR MENUS

By MARTHA LEE

HOT Summer days make busy homemakers cherish all short cuts in the preparation of family meals. At this time of the year lazy appetites need more stimulation than at most any other season.

Have you been overlooking the many uses of sour cream in your summer cookery? This is certainly the time to take advantage of the possibilities it offers. It will put new life in your menu planning.

Sour cream, soured cream, cultured cream, or salad cream—call it what you wish. It still means the start for something good to eat. Many homemakers think of using this product only when the cream on hand becomes sour.

A famous food authority has given her culinary word that this recipe for sour cream refrigerator rolls is among her favorites. The dough may be stored in the refrigerator for as long as five days—you may wish to take parts of it and make into rolls several times during these days.

Hot rolls for breakfast, luncheon or supper are always a delight. With this type hot breads during the warm summer months need no longer be a novelty. It requires a minimum of time and labor to prepare and not long hours of watching as in the old days of bread baking.

Hot rolls are the perfect complement to cold summer foods. This is one recipe where there is no guesswork involved in the amounts of flour needed. These rolls are made just as you would make a cake—following each step and measuring all ingredients accurately.

Have your dairyman leave a jar of sour cream and try this recipe tomorrow.

SOUR CREAM REFRIGERATOR ROLLS

1 cake compressed yeast
½ cup sugar
¾ cup butter
½ cup milk, scalded
2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup dairy made sour cream
4½ cups all-purpose sifted flour
1½ teaspoons salt

Crumble the yeast into a mixing bowl; add sugar and stir together until yeast liquefies. Let stand about 20 minutes. Meanwhile melt the butter in scalded milk. Beat eggs. Add sour cream; blend well with yeast and sugar mixture. Add lukewarm milk and butter and flour all at once. Beat 8 or 10 minutes. (Automatic mixer good for this purpose.) Place dough in covered dish and allow it to stand over night in refrigerator before using. The dough may remain in refrigerator as long as five days without deterioration.

The next day, let dough rise in warm place to double its original bulk or more. Knead in 1½ cups more flour. Roll out into two sheets about ¼ inch thick. Spread with thin layer of sour cream, sprinkle with brown sugar and add a few nut meats. Roll lengthwise cut like a jelly roll in slices 1½ inches thick. Place in buttered muffin tins lined with brown sugar, nut meats, and a dot of butter. Set in a warm place to rise to double their bulk. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes, then reduce heat to 350 and bake about 10 minutes longer. Yield 2 dozen rolls.

When only part of the dough is taken from refrigerator at a time, divide the amount of flour for kneading accordingly.

Now we offer a recipe for sour cream spice cake that makes a treat even more delicious than it looks. While it looks and tastes extravagant, the recipe calls for only one egg and no shortening is used except the sour cream.

Try this cake for picnics and bench parties baked in a loaf or shallow cake pan. Frost it if you like and carry it to the picnic in the pan. It may be baked in cupcakes or cut in squares; or it will make a delicious dessert served as a shortcake topped with fresh strawberries or raspberries and whipped cream.

SOUR CREAM SPICE CAKE

1 cup brown sugar
1 cup sour cream (thick)
1 egg, slightly beaten
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup raisins
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Combine all dry ingredients and sift together once. Combine sugar and sour cream, blend and add beaten egg. To this mixture add the dry ingredients, nuts and raisins. Stir only until well blended. Bake at 350 degrees for about 45 minutes. This recipe will fill one 8x8x2 inch cake pan. Mocha frosting is especially good on this cake as it blends perfectly with the spices used.

Mocha Frosting

2 tablespoons hot coffee (strong)
1 teaspoon butter
½ teaspoon vanilla
Confectioner's sugar

Melt butter in hot coffee and add vanilla. Then add the confectioner's sugar until the mixture is of the right consistency to spread.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX'S ADVICE on LOVE

A Lipstick From Hollywood

By ARLINE GOULD

WATCH for signs of a gold-rush in California cosmetics!

Finding a preparation these days that transfers some of Hollywood's glamour to your own personality, is a lot like finding a pearl in your oyster.

But leave it to those maestros of the art of make-believe to capture the same elusive loveliness for you as they have for Claudette Colbert, Alice Faye, Barbara Stanwyck and hundreds of other famous stars.

Perhaps you've never heard of the "royal family of Hollywood." It is not surprising, for while they stand for a combined experience of sixty-two years in the studios, their faces have never flashed on any silver screen.

And yet all Hollywood (at some time or other) has come to these four brothers for advice in hair styling, fashions and make-up. Now for the first time, these masters of creating loveliness make their skill available to you.

It seems almost paradoxical that their tenet should be one of naturalness. But when you stop to consider that the purpose of "make-up" is to create illusion, perhaps it is not so surprising.

Certainly, any preparation that focuses attention on artificiality, fails in the purpose for which it was intended. If your friends can tell where Nature's handiwork ends and your own begins, then it is high time to throw away the cosmetics you've been using.

Because nothing is more alluring (or devastating as far as masculine hearts are concerned) than a pair of moist, youthful lips, we are going to tell you today about a lipstick. A lipstick, we want to add, that is found in every Hollywood make-up box and one that has been used by more famous actresses than any other in the world.

POSED BY MYRNA LOY

It is now on sale in one Boston store. It is very, very new (as far as Boston is concerned), it is a jumbo-sized affair, made with a special creamy base, and comes in a lovely jade and gold case.

It is indelible, of course, and really keeps the lips as soft and moist as those you see on the screen. You have got to see it for yourself to realize how different it is from other so-called Hollywood affairs. (Maybe it's a poor parallel, but have you ever compared an original Shaparelli model with a very poor copy? Well, the result is much the same.)

To learn the name of this new Hollywood lipstick, which is exclusive with one store in town, call Arline Gould, Liberty 600, weekdays until 5, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

'Taboos' Keep Young Lovers Apart

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Has it ever occurred to you that we native-born Americans are just "foreigners" to some people born and bred in other countries?

They object as vigorously to their sons and daughters marrying into good, thrifty American families as we Americans often object to our young people marrying boys and girls born outside the United States.

Such intolerance is amazing today, when automobiles, airplanes and fast steamships help to eradicate boundaries and make us all better acquainted. Take this letter, for instance:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"The Atlantic Ocean was my birthplace. I was born when my parents came to this country, after conditions in their native land became intolerable. I went to the public schools, and have always felt myself to be truly American.

"My father took out naturalization papers because it helped him to get employment. But my parents have always regarded themselves as unhappy exiles.

ALWAYS WELCOMED

"I have felt more at home with American boys and girls, than with those who came from the country from which my parents fled, and Americans have always accepted me as one of themselves. When I went to their homes for parties and visits, I was treated the same as anyone else, accepted on my face value.

"But when these boys and girls came to my house, they were regarded with suspicion. Though my father was a United States citizen, young Americans were looked upon as "foreigners in our home.

"Mother never changed her way of cooking or bothered to learn more than a few words of English. Native dishes, as prepared by mother, are excellent, but corn has never been served in our family, because it is regarded as 'indigestible American food.'

"It's the same with ice cream, iced tea, fried chicken and loads of other things. Mother would regard eating a hot biscuit as a form of wilfulness.

TROUBLE STARTS

"Well, all this was as nothing to the rumpus raised when I became engaged to a splendid American boy, with whom I had gone through high school, and I had been in love with him for the past six years. He has a good job, and so have I, and we intend to be married and be the best Americans we know how.

"My fiance's family have been in this country for four generations. They have welcomed me cordially, and they are delighted their son is going to marry a girl with whom he went to school, and who is steady and not given to wild parties.

"But my mother told me if I married this foreigner, who is of a different race and a different religion, who has been reared on terrible American food and is unacquainted with customs of her beautiful native land, she will put on a sulking, refuse to see me married, and have my father read a burial in my behalf.

"All this is making me very unhappy, but it is not going to deter me from marrying the man I love. And it seems ridiculous to me that people who fled a country to escape intolerance, should keep it up when they get here.

DEAR CHILD:

My best wishes to the young couple who have taken the matter so sensibly, and decline to be kept apart by the customs of a land from which their people had to flee to escape persecution, yet who decline to extend a little freedom to their children.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The first time he met me, he asked for a date and told me he wanted a girl who went only with him and no one else. The last time I saw him he didn't act exactly natural. He broke his last date, and I haven't seen him since.

His boy friend was down last night and wanted to take me out. I wouldn't go with him. I thought it was a put-up scheme between them; that if I went with his friend, the boy would have an excuse for breaking with me altogether.

I don't smoke or drink, and the first boy claimed to admire me for that. He has never told me that he loves me. Should I ask him?" W. B.

MY DEAR GIRL:

It would take the "wisdom of the witches," as old-time people used to say, for a girl to put the question you're considering.

It's almost as dangerous as for a girl to ask a man to marry her.

Married Comrades

CHAPTER 346

I COULD not hurry Dicky. I realized that when he said with finality that he would not drive faster, adding the query, "Why borrow trouble before it jumps into your lap to be owned?"

"I really don't want you to drive faster," I said. "Of course, I'm dreadfully worried, but this has been too perfect a day to spoil."

"Now you're talking," my husband said. "Instead of driving faster, I'm just going to loaf along. And don't worry too much about the state of affairs at home. You'll probably have a bad twenty-four hours, but you'll be able to straighten things out. I'm banking on you. And tomorrow old Lil and Harry will be on the job. Then your troubles will be over."

"I shall try to be very calm." I told him, forcing a smile. "But I do wish Lillian were there. Why didn't she arrive when she was scheduled, or is that one of the forbidden questions?"

"I don't know whether it is forbidden or not," he said with a chuckle. "I don't know the answer myself. But I had a code wire from Lil just before I left, saying she and Harry would be on hand tomorrow."

"I shall be so glad to see them," I said. "They've been away on that trip years, it seems to me."

"No, only months," Dicky said, "but I don't deny that I'll be glad to see the old birds when they finally fly back to the old nest."

The next minute we were inside them, and the next Dicky had brought the car to a stop close to the veranda steps. Dicky blew the horn, and a few seconds later my mother-in-law, majestic, stately, stood in the doorway which Jim had thrown open.

But before she could speak to us, there was a howl from behind her, and stooping and twisting through the small space in the doorway beside her, Katie came rushing down the steps, threw herself on her knees beside me, clasping mine, and lifted her voice in hysterical sobbing.

Westinghouse

AS LOW AS 14¢ A DAY*

To provide modern, safe food-keeping facilities at lowest cost in 34 low-rent housing projects in 26 cities, the Housing Division of the U. S. Public Works Administration late in 1936 called for sealed bids from leading refrigerator manufacturers. Bids were based on initial price added to cost of electricity for ten years. Westinghouse won . . . though four other manufacturers quoted lower unit prices. Low current consumption made possible by Westinghouse features, convinced Government buyers that on a 10-year basis it costs less to own a Westinghouse.

WOOL STRIKERS IGNORE PLEA; NEAR CRISIS

With shortage of dock space mounting, and facing a possible sympathy strike from the longshoremen's union should the state interfere, the Boston wool handlers' strike approached a new crisis today.

Shipping lines and city wharves indicated they can continue to unload wool only 10 days or two weeks more.

More than 200 pickets today patrolled the 25 wool companies of this fabric metropolis, deadlocked by the strike, while approximately 500 members of the Wool Handlers and General Warehouse Employes Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, remained on strike.

APPEAL TO WORKERS

A move on the part of the wool trade, sending letters out to all employes yesterday asking them to return to work today with a new wage scale assured, was counteracted by the wool handlers' local early today, which sent telegrams to all members stating the strike had not been settled.

Question of the closed shop, demanded in the union's terms, remained the focal point of the controversy, with no solution in sight.

The new wage scale, already agreed to in the arbitration which has proceeded over a period of three weeks, guarantees increases of $5 and $6 to all workers, with a wage scale ranging from $30 to $35 a week.

FEW RETURN TO JOBS

Approximately a dozen men went to work today at Draper & Co., but union officials indicated they are all relatives of company employes, not union wool handlers.

At Commonwealth Pier approximately 25,000 of 200-pound wool bags are stored, awaiting transportation to the wool companies warehouses, while the S. S. Lewis of the Luckenbach lines was unloading another 4700 bags today.

Two more ship cargoes of wool are all the pier can accommodate, officials said.

EMBARGO CLAMPED DOWN

An embargo has been clamped on all wool cargoes by the Merchant & Miner's Lines, where approximately 3200 bags are stored.

At the army base, between 5000 and 8000 bags are stored now, while officials indicated they may refuse to accept cargoes if the surplus mounts.

The S.S. Nebraskan, of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., scheduled to unload wool within two days at Commonwealth Pier, was docked at the Wiggin Terminal in Charlestown to dispose of timber today.

'GEE, I HOPE THIS IS THE PLACE'

Finding Harvard Yard quite a bewildering place, Miss Florence Carleton of Camden, Maine, is beginning to wonder if she's ever going to find the right place to register as a Harvard summer school student. She was one of hundreds who were on hand today at the opening of the six weeks' session.

HEARST WINS AWARD FOR ENTERPRISE

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6—William Randolph Hearst and 11 other newspapermen were awarded the annual prizes of the National Headliners Club here in recognition of outstanding achievement in journalistic work.

Golf plaques will be presented to those named at the annual frolic of the club to be held here next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

THOSE INCLUDED

Those named include:

Most enterprise in journalism — William Randolph Hearst, for exclusive story obtained by him, first definitely announcing the impending marriage of former King Edward and the former Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Best domestic spot news reporting — Robert Olds, Associated Press, for coverage of Hindenburg disaster.

OTHERS NAMED

Others named were Henry McLelmore, Dr. Thomas Parran, John Lindsay, Arthur Menkin, Joseph Eaton, W. L. Carlson, H. V. Kaltenborn and Westbrook Pegler.

A dramatization of the minner in which the winners accomplished their journalistic tasks will be broadcast from a banquet at the Hotel Traymore Saturday at 7 p. m. over a coast-to-coast Columbia System network.

Earl Johnson, chairman of the awards committee, announced the awards after careful consideration of nominations by newspapers, magazines and press associations throughout the country.

NEWTON SCOUTS ACTIVE AT JAMBOREE

SPEND TIME BUILDING GATE

By EMILE HAJAR

Roslindale Boy Scout and assistant scoutmaster, who is acting as special correspondent for the Boston Evening American at the Jamboree.

Washington, D. C., July 6—Today the boys from Newton parted with some news about themselves and what they are doing. They have been trying to build a gate. Today it was finished.

Ernest Ould and James Bierer of Troop 19, were the construction engineers. Phil Shute and Leland Sosman, Troop 5 of Newton put up the flagpole.

* * *

Troop 2 has found a nice way to urge lagging scouts to come to dinner in a hurry. All boys who come to the table late are put through the hot oven. After once being heated, the boys do not go back for another treatment.

* * *

Gus Root, who has become proficient in the art of playing the "sweet" potato is unhappy. Someone not appreciative of fine music purloined his four sweet potatoes. Now Gus' disposition has turned sour.

* * *

Yesterday was a day of rest. I mean real rest. We have had a strenuous week. In the morning a huge field mass for Catholic Scouts was held in the Jamboree Arena and was celebrated by Archbishop Curley of Baltimore. The sermon was given by Archbishop Kelley of Oklahoma, head of the Catholic committee on scouting.

Charles Savage, Jr., Troop 7, West Roxbury, was one of the flagbearers in the parade to the arena. The Protestant Scouts had services in their own camps. Leading pastors from the churches in Washington were in charge.

In the evening a convocation of all the scouts at the Jamboree was held. Lanny Ross, radio and screen star, sang "Recessional" by Rudyard Kipling and led the scouts in the "The Scoutmaster's Prayer." At the request of the scouts, he sang "Home on the Range." Prominent church heads spoke on the part religion plays in scouting.

HEARING FRIDAY ON WAGE PACT

Washington, July 6 (AP)—The House Judiciary Committee announced today it would conduct a hearing Friday on an interstate minimum wage compact ratified by three New England states.

The compact to regulate minimum wages for women and minors under 21 years of age has been signed by Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The Senate education and labor committee recently approved the compact measure.

Last year the House passed the measure which seeks congressional consent to the compact, but it failed to receive Senate approval.

Strike Out-Moded Says Sen. Thomas

Chicago, July 6 (US)—Strikes are out-moded, U. S. Senator Elbert D. Thomas, member of the La Follette Civil Liberties committee, declared here, adding:

"Even the Reds who are reputed to have a hand in present day labor unrest know they can't win a strike. History shows that every strike ends up ultimately at a conference table."

Kills Self Week After Kin Does

New Bedford, July 6—Walter Rubczak, 45, was dead today, a suicide in the same room in which his brother took his life a week ago.

According to police, Rubczak was asphyxiated by illuminating gas in his Salisbury street lodging house. His brother, Albert, 50, died by the same method because he feared to face a necessary major operation.

Diz Dean Tantrum Over—He'll Pitch

St. Louis, July 6 (NSI)—Dizzy Dean, eccentric ace pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, who said he was taking a "run-out powder" on the all-star game at Washington tomorrow, has changed his mind and is on his way to the national capital to take part in the classic, Mrs. Patricia Dean, Dizzy's wife, announced today.

LYDON IN RACE FOR MAYOR

Proclaiming himself as the "candidate of the unemployed," Daniel T. Lydon, 37, of 60 Everton street, Dorchester, filed an application for mayoralty papers at City Hall today.

He was the 12th man to make such application and the second candidate from Ward 15, the first being Representative Francis X. Coyne.

Lydon, son of Daniel T. Lydon, South Boston political leader of a generation ago, will receive his nomination papers August 31.

Harvard Summer School Opens Registration

Registration started today at the 67th annual session of the Harvard University summer school of arts and sciences and education.

First to register at headquarters in Memorial Hall was Miss Grace Carolyn Carleton of 10 Sheldon avenue, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Most of the summer students will register before Thursday evening, at Memorial Hall. After that the registration office will be shifted to Sever Hall, which will remain the school headquarters throughout the term.

Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, director of the school, will address the students tomorrow evening at Sanders Theater. A well-rounded out schedule of social activities will supplement the more serious work of the men and women students.

JAPAN CLAIMS VICTORY

Hsinking, Manchoukuo, July 6 (AP)—The Japanese army declared today it had defeated a sizable detachment of Soviet troops in a day long battle on the disputed frontier of Manchoukuo and Siberia.

The government of Manchoukuo immediately made strong representations to Moscow over the renewed outbreak of hostilities.

Soviet troops the army charged, launched two attacks against combined Japanese-Manchouguoan border guards Monday morning near the little frontier town of Chienshan.

An army communique declared the Russians opened fire and wounded one Japanese soldier before the assaults were repulsed.

Throughout the day, the army asserted, the Soviet troops brought up heavy artillery and in the evening started a bombardment of the Manchoukuoan border with heavy cannon.

The Japanese and Manchoukuoan troops were said to have advanced to meet the assault, driving back the alleged invaders with a vigorous counter attack.

Two Soviet soldiers were reported to have been killed in the engagement and many more wounded.

The latest outbreak of open warfare was considered here to be serious, coming as it does so soon after the serious break between Russia and Japan caused by last week's battle of the Amur river.

Armed Passenger Takes Cash, Cab

Alfred Reed, 27, Estes street, Everett, a taxicab driver, reported today that he was held up at gunpoint by a passenger who pointed a gun at the rear of his neck. Reed told police that the man stole seven dollars in cash, forced him out of the car at Massachusetts avenue and Magazine street, Roxbury, and drove in the direction of Dorchester. He was about 25 years old, Reed said.

Rob Weymouth Gas Station of $92

It was an expensive nap that Donald Swart, 21, had today at a gasoline filling station in Washington street, Weymouth—and now police are looking for a 20-year-old youth, a neighbor of Swart.

Swart, employed by John Healey, was becoming drowsy early today when the other youth dropped in. Swart asked his friend to serve customers while he took a nap. The friend assented, but when Swart woke up again the station was deserted, and gone were Swart's bicycle and $92 from the cash register.

"Buck Jones" Now Legally Buck Jones

Jones, veteran screen cowboy, told a Los Angeles court he had used his professional name for the last 15 years. His request for legal use of it was granted.

Edmonton, Alta., July 6 (Canadian Press)—Six passengers and the pilot of a tri-motored transport plane were unreported today on the maiden flight of a passenger-mail service from here to Whitehorse, Yukon Territory.

2 Men Missing in Delaware Storm

Wilmington, Del., July 6 (AP)—Two men missing, more than 100 families temporarily homeless, nearly every secondary road within a 25-square mile radius southwest of Wilmington under water and property damage which may reach hundreds of thousands of dollars were the result of a heavy rain storm which visited upper Delaware last night. The missing men were last seen in an automobile near Newark, Del., just before the waters swept their car into the flood from a nearby mill race which had broken its banks.

Treadway Delay Holds Up Tax Plan

Washington, July 6 (AP)—A Representative's failure to reach the capital on time caused postponement today of the Congressional tax committee's decision on what its future course shall be.

A railroad washout prevented arrival of Representative Treadway R-Mass.). Other members declined to act without a full membership. The meeting may be held Thursday.

IS CARBON stealing your gasoline?

Not only does hard carbon rob you of the full motoring enjoyment of a smooth, snappy motor, but it steals your gasoline by wasting power.

Hard carbon works so insidiously with its ill effects built up so gradually, that poor-car performance and low mileage are often accepted as the true level of the car's efficiency.

That's why the results from using JENNEY Hy-Power or JENNEY Aero are so apparent and so startling. JENNEY gasoline frees your car of hard carbon—

You feel greater power, you hear smoother operation and you see definite increase in mileage as harmful carbon goes out, and your motor is given the chance to deliver its rated efficiency.

Start using JENNEY Hy-Power or JENNEY Aero—anti-knock, high test, and now Solvenized—all at no extra cost.

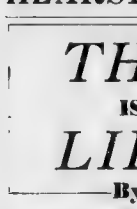
BATTLE OUSTER OF TEACHER

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

The sudden death of John Albert Cousens, president of Tufts since 1919, removes from the metropolitan scene one of our most able if not picturesque figures among college presidents. One never heard a great deal about President Cousens. So far as publicity is concerned hereabouts, Conant of Harvard, Marsh of Boston University, and the incumbent of Boston College's presidency usually get most of the gravy. Possibly Compton of Tech comes next. Tufts is a smaller and a poorer institution. Perhaps it is a bit more old-fashioned, and traditional in its education habits. Tufts men knew and respected Dr. Cousens, but he seldom crashed the front pages unless he really had something of value to say.



ROBERT E. ROGERS

In the matter of the Teachers' Oath bill, he stood loyally and strongly by those members of his faculty who were under fire. Perhaps even more interesting as a sign of his independence was the fact that, although personally a "dry," he eventually came to support the nation-wide demand for repeal.

Clerical "Prexy" Drops Out of the Picture

What interests me more was the fact that as college president he was definitely of what might be called the "new school" in that arduous office as it exists today.

In former times it used to be almost taken for granted that a college president should be a clergyman, one of the older denominations in these parts. Almost invariably he was an elderly man, scholarly in theology and biblical exegesis, quite frequently a preacher famous for his eloquence. With those capabilities a college president tended also to be an able classical and Hebrew scholar. That was the pattern college president up to the time, say, when Charles Eliot was elected to Harvard and, a little earlier, William Barton Rogers founded the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the one a chemist, the other a geologist.

In the three-quarters of a century since those events the clerical college president has tended to drop out of the picture, except in markedly denominational schools. Instead, the president has tended to be a scholar primarily, one who made his reputation in one of the liberal arts or the sciences, and sometimes as a lesser administrative officer in the institution. Angell, Lowell, Compton, Neilson, Hopkins, Ham are men of that sort.

Cousens Started Career in the Coal Business

But Cousens was different. He started life running his own coal business and later turned to banking. As an undergraduate he was apparently more the "activities" man than the "grind." He was a fraternity man, was honored by his classmates with office, and played football, meanwhile earning a Phi Beta Kappa. As a business man and banker he was so successful as to become the first president of the Brookline Board of Trade and, later, a trustee of Tufts. In that work he made his mark to such an extent as to become acting president on the death of Dr. Herman Bumpus and then, in 1919, to succeed him.

That is what I mean by the "modern" college president. Theology is no longer important. Profound scholarship in the liberal arts or sciences is perhaps less esteemed than ability in business or administration. More and more business ability is coming to be deemed most important. A commander in the navy, Ralph Earl, is president of Worcester Polytechnic; Harold W. Dodds of Princeton was a business man and the new president of the University of Wisconsin succeeding Glenn Frank, whose name I forget made his mark as city manager of Cincinnati.

Running College Affairs Important Corporation Job

More and more it is recognized that running a college or university is a great corporative job. Technology, for instance, has not only a president but a vice-president, as in a corporation. They both are scholars but they divide the work so that the labor and responsibility which killed MacLaurin and, later, Stratton, may be not so overwhelming. Perhaps Cousens might have lived longer had he not carried the whole burden.

Dr. Cousens has for nearly 20 years been recognized as an able and successful president of Tufts, not only as a business administrator, a builder of the colleges and graduate schools in scholarship, but also in his relations to the students. In that respect I am inclined to think that this new type of college head fills a great need. Certainly Dr. Cousens did

'Jilt Girl' Must Set Date

If 21-year-old Theresa "Terry" Shrum of Durham street, Back Bay, had to do some wondering and waiting a couple of weeks ago she shoe is on the other foot today.

It's her wandering sailor sweetheart, Robert H. Newell of Jackson, Miss., who doesn't know now when those postponed wedding bells will ring. That's what Mrs. Leonard Stephens, the girl's mother, said, anyhow.

TERRY TO SET DATE

"Bob's a fine boy and he'll make a good husband. The church is ready for the wedding and the license is waiting at City Hall," Mrs. Stephens explained. "But when I asked Bob about the date, he said,

"'It's up to Terry this time. She wouldn't tell me.'"

Terry and Bob, nevertheless, were on the best of terms and were spending a day on the sands at Nantasket, all apparently forgotten and forgiven—except that "Terry" is picking the date.

Terry, it will be recalled, was left sitting on her doorsteps the night that she and young Newell were to have trod the marital measure together. At that time, the girl knew only that her fiance had gone "for a shave" and vanished.

Last night the doorbell at 3 Durham street, Back Bay, rang. "Terry" rushed out and into the arms of Robert in answer to a whispered word from the girl Robert fairly shouted

ARRIVES FROM N Y

"Of course, I'm in love with you or I wouldn't have come back."

Robert explained he had just arrived from New York where he had signed off an oil tanker that was originally due to dock in Boston, but was shunted off at the last minute. Asked about his strange disappearance June 15, he explained he had gone for a walk, boarded a train, and gone home to "talk it over with mother."

FIGHTING FOR JOB

Although the movies once beckoned to this pretty, blonde Saugus high school teacher, Miss Isobel Hallin, she was firm today in her announced intention of fighting to a finish to retain her position in spite of a school committee vote asking for her resignation. Friends began circulating a citizens' petition demanding a public hearing for Miss Hallin.

SAUGUS CITIZENS CALL MASS MEETING

JOB PETITION CIRCULATED

Friends of Miss Isabel Hallin, 25 years old, blonde and pretty, put a petition in circulation today to try to save Miss Hallin her job as a teacher at Saugus high school.

A mass meeting of citizens is being planned for July 20 the date of the next meeting of the school committee, which voted 3 to 2 to give Miss Hallin "an opportunity to resign."

It was about a cocktail party for members of the high school dramatic club—a party which Miss Hallin declares is only a figment of somebody's imagination—he said to have been the reason for the ouster vote.

Two members of the school committee, who voted against the resignation motion, today quoted the high school principal as declaring Miss Hallin's record was exceptional and excellent.

ISSUE STATEMENT

These two school committee members, Chairman George A. McCarrier and Committeeman Percy A. Haley, s... said the superintendent of schools had notified the committee that he found no corroboration of reports about Miss Hallin.

In a joint statement Chairman McCarrier and Haley said:

"We regret exceedingly being called upon for any statement in the unfortunate circumstances surrounding Miss Isabel Hallin, English instructor and dramatic coach at Saugus high school.

"We do, however, want to give an explanation to the taxpayers of Saugus of our standing in this matter.

"We do not believe any action should be taken by the school committee relative to a graduate of the local schools, teaching in Saugus, without giving the party the right of at least a perfunctory hearing, regardless of the law in the situation.

SAY RUMORS FALSE

"Last Thursday Superintendent of Schools Vernon W. Evans submitted to the committee a written report containing the recommendation that she be engaged for another year.

"In writing, the superintendent said he had been unable to corroborate any of the stories in circulation regarding Miss Hallin and that he personally believed many of them false. He also reported that no one had come forward with any information against her.

"The members of the school committee who made the most serious charges against her withdrew them, stating they were found to be rumor.

"The principal of Saugus high school, Mr. J. A. W. Pierce, in answer to questions regarding Miss Hallin as a school teacher stated that she had maintained excellent discipline and that she was above the average in the English department. Also that she had been absent only about four and one-half days on account of scarlet fever.

"Miss Hallin, he said, teaches six periods a day, with 35 to 40 pupils per period, and that she also conducts a seventh library period. Her teaching load is 240 pupils, the largest in the entire school.

RECORD DEFENDED

"In addition to this she has coached dramatic productions, and all of these things have been done to the principal's entire satisfaction. He said she has cooperated with all of his desires. She corrects her own papers and performs her work to his entire satisfaction, better than some of the teachers at the high school.

"Two weeks ago various members of the school committee brought out various rumors about Miss Hallin at a meeting of the committee. This was followed by a motion calling for her resignation at July 1, which was finally passed as a motion giving her the right to resign.

"Committeeman Haley offered a motion that no action be taken in view of the fact that there had been no hearing.

"There has never been any complaint from any parent or individual relative to Miss Hallin as a teacher or about her work. Any rumors which may or may not be in circulation relative to her school work or outside activities have never in any way come to our attention."

Fiermonte Jailed For 5 Days After 'Riot' in Court

SNIPER VICTIM ONLY GRAZED

OVERHEAD HIGHWAYS PROPOSED BY COYNE

Overhead, high-speed highways are the only solution for Boston's traffic problem, Rep. Francis X. Coyne, chairman of the mayor's traffic study commission declared today.

According to Coyne, the commission's tentative report to Mayor Mansfield within a week will recommend that the Atlantic avenue elevated structure be changed into an auto highway.

While this has been proposed in past years, Coyne says of that the new plan would make the highway a toll route.

The Boston Elevated Railway would be permitted to charge 10 cents per passenger, and thus the company would not have to be reimbursed out of the public treasury to abandon the Atlantic avenue line.

In the not distant future an overhead highway should be built across the Common and Public Garden, in such a way as to preserve the beauty of these places Coyne added.

This project is not embodied in the coming report of the traffic body, he says.

Under the new Atlantic avenue plan, the overhead highway would be extended around the transfer side of the North Station, passing over the railroad tracks to join the Northern artery.

"More than 300,000 automobiles come into Boston every day," said Coyne. "Within five or six years, the traffic problem in Boston will be so tremendous that, if it is not solved now, it will be a hopeless situation.

"The cost of the Atlantic avenue project would be about $3,000,000. There would be four traffic lanes. The highway should accommodate 50,000 cars daily.

"There would be a toll of 10 cents per passenger, the same as Elevated passengers now pay. The Atlantic avenue line is a losing proposition for the Elevated.

LOGICAL FOR "L"

"As far as the Elevated is concerned, the project is much more logical and beneficial than taking over the Narrow Gauge Railway.

"Reconstruction should be done by the Boston Elevated Railway and 50-year bonds floated by the Boston Metropolitan Transit District.

"The day is coming, whether we like it or not, when it will be imperative that we construct an overhead highway above the Common and Public Garden. It can be done without hurting a single tree.

"Such a highway can be constructed in such a way that it will add to, rather than detract from, the beauty of these pleasure spots."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Six months ago, the practical Miss Eleanor Brigham started a tiny business of her own in her home at 69 River street. She called it "Little Useful," and offered to perform various small services not attempted by the ordinary commercial agencies.

She has many hundreds of clients now, and 200 men and women on her rolls who can do an astounding number of odd jobs." Just for instance, she can provide you with a confidential secretary . . . a chaperone for your children . . . a guide . . . someone to tell bedtime stories to youngsters, or read aloud to invalids . . . a teacher of rhumba . . . an expert ... a fourth at bridge . . . an exercise ... pledges . . . someone to help you with your income tax return . . . a mender of old tapestries . . . a darner of silk's and turner of short cuts . . . a person to wrap your bundles or to pack your trunks . . . an apartment hunter . . . an escort, in evening clothes . . . a tutor . . . a numerologist.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

That will give you some idea. She started her service after she had observed scores of friends with some individual talent they were not using, and because she is convinced to be wholly idle is to be miserable. A bundle of energy herself, she would think that!

Combination of Fun, Luck and Work, Too

Humor keeps cropping up in her work, and she likes it. One of her first assignments was to stuff a toy elephant that required needle surgery. She had to worry around for ivory wool to match. Another time she recovered a large fur coat in half an hour and without informing the police, but that, she says, was just beautiful luck.

Curiously, one of the stiffest assignments is the apparently simple one of getting maids to accompany families into the mountains or to the seashore on short notice.

All has been forgiven "Biddy," a prize Irish setter that is once more the pride and joy of the William J. Flynns of Hingham. She and her daughter "Paddy" won blue ribbons as the best setters in the dog show held recently at the Knight estate in Main street, Hingham.

Once "Biddy" let the Flynns down badly. When her master learned she was to have pups, he went around promising one of the litter to each of half a dozen business friends. "Paddy" proved all the litter there was, and Mr. Flynn's face was redder than "Biddy's" coat for days and days. He laughs about the whole thing now that her only pup has turned out so well.

Expert on Travelling Gives Inside Pointers

In his years as Boston district manager of the American Express Company, James Shaw has learned that people who travel do certain things in a certain way, but he hasn't yet found out why.

A Bostonian, starting a trip around the world, usually goes East, he says, while a Westerner starts West. It isn't a matter of convenience. It is easy for people on either seaboard to travel in reverse. Mexico is a summer resort for Americans now. Once nobody went there in the hot months but scientists and oil field engineers.

New Englanders go to Alaska at any time of year. Middle Westerners usually start East on vacation, and wind up visiting one of Boston's famous burying grounds or standing in awe in front of Plymouth Rock. Another thing Shaw knows . . . a lot of people don't travel to get somewhere but to get away from something . . . frequently themselves.

An insurance company has puzzled out a new formula for people who want to know how long they may "reasonably" expect to carry on. You just subtract your present age from 80, multiply the result by 7, and divide by 10. If the total doesn't please you, don't get palpitations. There are plenty of people walking around who should have been dead 20 or 30 years ago, according to the law of averages.

Jacobs Trying To Bluff Der Max | Doesn't Want Louis-Farr Yet

By JACK CONWAY

MIKE JACOBS OF the Twentieth Century Club and the other gentlemen who like to play heavyweight poker do not take any days off to practice. They believe that by keeping in actual competition all seven days of the week they will gain the best results.

Mr. Boston

Jacobs is trying to bluff Max Schmeling into signing for a title bout with Joe Louis by announcing that the "Brown Bomber" will oppose Tommy Farr, the Welshman who holds the British heavyweight championship, in New York in September.

Mike does not want a Louis-Farr tussle this year. He would rather build up Farr by having him knock out Jimmy Braddock and one or two more heavyweights, and then send him against the champion in a summer bout in 1938.

Jacobs keeps his ear close to the pulse of the public, and he knows that the fight the fans wish to see is Louis vs. Max Schmeling.

Such a contest would be certain to draw a million-dollar gate and would net substantial profits to all parties connected with the promotion.

A Louis-Farr bout this year could not expect to draw more than $700,000 and that kind of money does not mean much of a profit for the promoter.

The Louis-Braddock tussle ended up with a net gate of $940,000. Jacobs told me he would be fortunate if he broke even.

Heavyweight champions today get paid 42½ to 50 per cent of the receipts. The challenger usually collects 17½ per cent, while ball parks demands a 10 per cent cut for the use of their parks.

There are then the expenses for preliminaries and for promotion. It is necessary for a bout to draw more than $700,000 to assure a promoter a substantial profit.

* * *

SCHMELING HAS MANY BACKERS

MAX SCHMELING would have plenty of backers if he were to clash with Louis. The Louis who won the title from Braddock would have been knocked out by Schmeling, in the opinion of this writer. Louis is still a poor defensive boxer, while he is hesitant and uncertain even when he is attacking.

One should not be too severe in judging Louis' shortcomings as a boxer, as he is only three years out of the ranks of the amateurs. It takes five to six years to make a finished boxer.

Gene Tunney was boxing as a professional for eight years before he reached the form that enabled him to outscore Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia.

I sat near Louis' corner as the latter won the title from Jimmy Braddock and listened to Blackburn coach the "Brown Bomber."

Blackburn was particularly anxious to have Louis pull away from Braddock's right-hand punches, while at the same time he tried to get Joe to counter with hard blows to the head and body while the former titleholder was off balance.

Louis could only think of getting out of range of Braddock's right hand and failed to counter, much to the disgust of Blackburn.

* * *

WOULD FEAR SCHMELING PUNCH

IF SCHMELING were to meet Louis in September, it is certain the "Brown Bomber" would fear the German's knockout punch. I do not believe Louis will ever be able to get out of his mind the crushing defeat he received from Schmeling last year.

Louis handlers will advance to him numerous reasons why Schmeling won from Schmeling in a return bout, but the champion will always have the thought back in his mind that the German heavyweight dropped him to the canvas with a terrific right and stole to the jaw in the fourth round.

I never saw any heavyweight given a more decisive licking than was administered to Louis by Schmeling. It was difficult for anybody who witnessed the bout to understand why Louis' jaw wasn't broken by the right hand punches that Schmeling showered at him.

Louis would not be human if he forgot what Schmeling did to him, and therefore in the event of a return match with the German he is certain to carry a heavy mental hazard into the ring.

The public realizes all this, which is why Mike Jacobs would like to arrange another Louis-Schmeling bout. It would prove the greatest heavyweight natural since Gene Tunney defended his title against Jack Dempsey in a Chicago ring ten years ago.

PLAYING FARR AGAINST MAX

IF JACOBS WAS anxious to promote a Louis-Farr tussle in September, he wouldn't announce the match so early. He would first give more time for the noble ballyhoo.

Jacobs, however, would like to use Farr to force Schmeling to consent to his terms. These terms call for Schmeling to leave a substantial part of his purse from his bout with Louis with Mike Jacobs as a guarantee that in the event he wins he will defend his title for the promoter of the Twentieth Century Club.

Mike found out in the Braddock case that it is easy to break even a so-called iron-clad contract. In the case of Schmeling, Jacobs realizes if Max can win the title without putting up any money guarantees that he will defend it in the United States, he will take it back with him to Germany and never return to this country.

Winchester Scene of Play

By BILL GRIMES

There are plenty of divots flying today at the Winchester Country club, for 140 contestants are playing the first 18-hole qualifying round of the 53rd annual Massachusetts amateur championship.

With few exceptions, the same field will be in action tomorrow and then the low 32 will be paired for match play. After [illegible] of 18 hole match play the [illegible] will fight it out for the title of the Bay State amateur.

Although these have been many amateur champs who have starred on the third floor, the Winchester has been the scene of this classic.

Back in 1919 Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford met for the first and last time in the finals of a state amateur championship and the former was returned the winner.

The last time the state was at Winchester—six years ago—Freddie Wright not only won the title for the second time but he also established an all time record for consecutive wins, four.

CROSSLEY FAVORITE

were beaten when they entered to defend.

Clark Hodder is the defending champion, and he's pitted against a strong field

Among the contenders are three former champions. For the West Joe Lynch and Bill Bass, who will probably have [illegible] trouble before they are eased out of the running.

Wilfred Crossley, Norfolk, is a heavy favorite for the title. He has not played much competitive golf this spring but his game is better than ever, judging from his record making rounds at his home course and the 74 he posted at Marshfield.

The Marion twins, Leo and Ed, will bear watching as well. Ned Patterson, Oakley, and Ted Bishop, Woodland.

YOUNG CONTENDERS

There are a half dozen or more youngsters in the field with the ability to ruin things for the more famous contenders, namely Joe Hoffman, Wollaston; Francis Devlin, Brae Burn, Bob Sides Jr., Essex, Bobby Hood, Salem, Kenzie Corcoran, Oyster Harbors, Gerry Anderson, Green Hill, and Art Rogers, Winchester.

Among the starters in today's qualifications is Perley Chase, Winchester. He is [illegible] in the state's amateur championship on 26 years. Back in 1921 at the Worcester Country Club, he skipped through to the finals, in which he was beaten by Jesse P. Guilford. Then he retired from championship competition.

Bostonian Bows In Sculls Race

Philadelphia, Pa., July 6—Joseph R. Smith of the Union Boat Club, Boston, was defeated ten lengths by Joe Burk, former Penn oarsman in the championship senior singles race, feature event of the annual Peoples Regatta on the Schuylkill.

Pawson Second In N. Y. Grind

Albany, N. Y., July 6—Mel Porter of New York had his second long distance running championship of the year today.

Porter, who won the National A. A. U. Marathon at Washington last month, led a stellar field home in the Schenectady-Albany run—A. A. U. 30-kilometer event.

Second was Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R. I., nearly four minutes behind. Third was Jean Bertrand of Melrose.

Tigers Take Two, Jump to Second

Detroit, July 6 (U.P.)—The Detroit Tigers soared into second place from fourth on the wings of a pair of holiday victories over the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 4 and 7 to 4, the latter in 10 innings. The games were witnessed by 22,000 fans.

Loose fielding by the Chicks accounted largely for the Tiger victory in the opener. Rudy York's home run with two on in the 5th ended the second encounter.

Home runs by Hank Greenberg his 18th of the season, and Bill Rogell were the big blows of the first game, clouting alone in three runs with his four-bagger in the first inning and Rogell connected with one on in the second.

By THOMAS C. WATSON

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 6 (INS)—Horton Smith, blond Viking of the American expeditionary forces, today practically stole the show in the qualifying round of the British open golf championship by firing his second successive 69 at the field to take the lead for the medal with a score of 138 for the thirty-six-hole distance.

Smith's first 69 was made on the so-called "medal" links at Carnoustie to tie Aubrey Boomer of France and establish a new course record. The 69 of today was made as nearly Burnside a great golf match that missed the record because Joe Kirkwood.

Another American had already [illegible] the mark earlier in the day with a 67. The scoring [illegible] was remarkable in that [illegible] started to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Skipper Victim Of Swordfish

Block Island, R. I., July 6. Captain Alfred Cyr of Boston, Mass., was recovering today from a chest wound inflicted by a 200-pound swordfish that charged the small boat he was in and ran its sword through the bottom of the craft.

The fisherman was hauling the fish harpooned a short time before, from a larger boat when it raced toward him and he was unable to get out of its way.

Hearst Eastern Tennis Title Play July 26

THREE N. E. Champs GOING

TOURNAMENT HUGE SUCCESS

A trio of worthy champions, representing the most capable of New England's tennis ranks, are today hard at work polishing for the advanced stages of the Hearst Grand National championships

Sylvia Hatch [illegible] red headed beauty from Winchester, Paul Shafer of Melrose the former Dartmouth star and hockey ace, and Ed Fuller of Salem, captain of next year's North Carolina tennis team, are our New England titleholders survivors of a mammoth field which wrote records in New Haven, Harvard University and Longwood during the past two weeks.

The New England championships over the first week forward to the Eastern sectional play which starts in New York on July 26 is one of the several awards which go to them as a result.

GREAT Horses to ENTER SESSION OPENS MONDAY

By TRACKMAN

Salem, N. H. July 6—The thoroughbreds continue their merry whirl here for the remainder of the week and then the tree back to Suffolk Downs Boston's metropolitan establishment will begin.

A gala summer meeting is listed for Suffolk Downs between July 1 and August 14. Feature will be the running of the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap, which has attracted the nominators of the bulwarks on handicap aces in the land.

Charles F. Adams, Suffolk's treasurer, is confident that all records for attendance and wagering at previous meetings will be smashed at the coming Suffolk season.

Closing day feature for the Rockingham meeting will be the spread at the Rockingham Park $10,000 added Handicap, won last year by Weston Adams' Gallant Clay. Mr. Adams' colt cannot defend his laurels this season as he has been retired to stud at the Adams Framingham farm.

Texas has a mighty representation on Northern camps going on at New England circuit, due to Sam Smith's influence.

Smith, who revived racing at Rockingham in 1933, went to Texas when his music wagering became illegal in these parts and brought back a batch of horses with him.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Every Junior Birdman and Birdwoman will have an equal chance to win a three weeks' vacation cruise through the Panama Canal and a flight from Los Angeles to Boston or a flight from New York to Hollywood and return in the nation-wide contest which will be announced on the Junior Birdmen page of this coming Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

The winner of the chief prize, the cruise from New York through the Panama Canal to Los Angeles and the flight home may take a parent or adult friend. All expenses of this three weeks' vacation for the two will be paid by the Junior Birdmen organization.

No contest ever has aroused such widespread interest, enthusiasm and efforts by air-minded boys and girls. It means opportunity of a lifetime.

In addition to the three weeks' cruise there will be 16 other experimental flights to United Aircraft Manufacturing Corp., New York and Hartford.

In each of these 16 cities there will have been days of junior aeronautical engineering and demonstrations.

Best of all, the main prizes will be followed by 10,000 others, attractive and valuable, and awarded promptly to the boys and girls who win them.

Well, get YOUR copy of the Boston Sunday Advertiser this coming Sunday and read all the details on the Junior Birdmen page. Of this you can be certain. There are no model planes to build, no essays to write and no drawings to be made.

It is just a simple, easy contest in which the 10-year old member has as much chance to win as the 21-year-old member and a new member has as much chance as a charter member.

"Bill" a nephew of Harold Grant, director of aeronautics at Waltham schools, came to New England just a few weeks ago from Camp Verde, Ariz.

He lived on the Rafter Bar T ranch and rode broncos every day. It was a joyful life which made Bill's return from his home, He was editor of the school paper.

"Bill" home was near the Apache Indian reservation and frequently saw them tend crops and guide cattle. A favorite of the dancing they do for the tourists' parties.

During the championship contest Bill was visited by Gov. Hurley. The governor was dressed in a cowboy suit. The governor also knew a great deal about the Arizona ranch life.

It's a gadget developed by engineers, so that the gents can discuss how they spend money each week and the reception such said expenditures get in the home halls.

"N. F. T."

Men have been recruited to take part in a set built of the voice disguiser, which transmits the tones in deep but quite unrecognizable fashion. Another subject suggested for debating is the problem of discouraging wives in the practice of exaggerating when regard to money items.

FLEETING FLASHES

The word premiere is now being used by the famous team of Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein 2d. We heard as highlights of the 3 hour musical modern music from WNAC's 6th evening at 9:30.

Not, by any means, to wish the langorous summer days away too swiftly, but in the matter of a long-range forecast, the column is given reason to believe that—come Sept.—a quick switch in the State Public Utilities Comish line-up will see Abraham C. Webber, the ex-ass't D. A., losing the chairmanship, and Commissioner Leo H. Leary, old Crimson grid hero and coach, taking the niche . . . In that month the term of Republican Leonard Hardy expires . . . Liaison whispers that Gov. Hurley then appoints a Democrat to fill the Hardy vacancy, and at the same time names Lawyer Leary chairman, he being a current fair-haired boy with Charlie . . . Under the playing rules, it's only necessary for the Gov. to name the lad for the top spot . . . The chieftain's word is law there, you betcha . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

Police Upsy-Daisies:

Again Liaison whispers, but from another corner, and this time the pillar has it that sure bets for Aug. in the Hub's police shooting skeds are Lieuts. Tom Harvey (of traffic), Johnny McArdle (Charlestown) and Lawrence Dunn (of the harbor Barnacle Billa) all to be made captains . . . Not clear in the cards, but probabilities, are Lieut. Lawrence Waitt (hdqrs. radio room) for lift to capt. IF a capt. is made in that room; Capt. Tom Kavanaugh for a return to No. End station after rubbing off the recruits' ruff edges; Lieut. Wm. Donovan (now skippering at the No. End as utility for Kavanaugh) taking over as pilot for old Sta. 3 (Joy st.) when it's reopened—and Capt. James Sheehan (racket-cracker) remaining on his assignment . . .

Turn on the Moon:

For some time the Hollywood lads were worried about Jack White, the tenderfoot zaney imported from Manhattan's "Club 18" to thread his lunacies through the web of Walter Wangers celluloid "Send Street" . . . They were very, very worried, as a matter of fact . . . . . .

Strong, determined men were required to tear him out of bed in the morning . . . Traversing the streets, outside and inside the lot, he refused to open his eyes and had to be led . . . But inside, on the sets, with the glare of spotlights, he was his own nutty self . . . For years he'd been up with the twilight and abed with the dawn . . . But now all is sweetness and light and also hallelujah . . . The boys back at "Club 18" are informed from the Coast that Jack, at long last, has been sunbaked . . .

Once Over Lightly:

Don't be surprised if Winchester's Sylvia Hatch, 21-yr.-old eye-filler who captured the women's singles title in the Hearst regionals tennis sport at Harvard, dons a bridal veil in the fall . . . For benefit of a lad whose tag is Campbell—and on whose dad's court at Duxbury she trained for the net tournament . . . Police Comish Timility had a cold G on the line for an artist to portrait his late Dad 'Diamond Jim' . . . The painting will be presented to Hub's school dept. for hanging in the new E. B. S. school named for the old-time sportsman when the school is opened in Dec. . . .

Speaking of tennis, the column Scooge was assigned to watch the Hearst tennis finals Saddy—because he'd never seen a match and knew nothing about it . . . 'I want somebody who doesn't know tennis to write about it so I can understand it, too,' sez the ed . . . The first thing the Scooge caught on to at Soldiers Field was that tennis as well as frequently golf, Love is scored as Nothing . . . That is, if you've got Love what've you got? . . . Was your weight a great big Goose-Egg and you're the Goose . . . The lad who invented the system of tennis scoring must have giggled . . . But the Hearst tournament was the largest, yet the most smoothly run of any ever . . .

Hub's Police Sarge John Devine, Sta. 4 at Peter Bent Brigham Hosp. with stone trouble that see him in no diamonds . . . State Police Safety Comish Paul Kirk's son Gordon McLean sojourning at Lone Champion . . . And Billy Conroy, or Johnny Dowd's perfect Boy, as in meaning the lad singing at Silver Beach No. Fa. mouth wherever he dukes in for seashore bait and cottage . . .

Not without some self-consciousness, Special Officer John Bresnahan of the Hub's gendarmery (Remember the shakeup confusion?) discovers that he's fast becoming no mean shakes of a philatelist . . . Assigned to Gov. Hurley's office, Bresnahan has access to the heavy mail, much of it foreign, and his trusty shears are snipping off juicy specimens from all corners of the globe . . . N. Y.'s Yacht Club opens a 65 G room Sept., in the 52nd St. spot . . . Bert Frohman signed for baton wielder and Henry Youngman re. c.'s, with Pianogal Frances Faye in the show . . .

Hub's Selma Hoffman and Arthur Simon, ex with Sara Horlick, now appear in Manhattan with Patricia Bowman—in the Russian Imperial Ballet, no less . . . Fokine, Ballet Russe producer, directs . . . Word comes from the Coast that Nyra Nash, singer along the lines of Ethel Merman, in screen testing . . . Piping at Cleveland's Great Lakes Exposish, she was caught by Rufus LeMaire . . . Doc Joseph W. Devine, police surgeon, bedded down with a strange malady—grass fever . . . In the form of a rash all over the body, the Doc caught it while seeding his So. Peter Arno Proves He's Some Actor — AND NOW HE'S AN ACTOR

Romps About Cohasset Stage

By LEO GAFFNEY

Peter Arno, nationally-known for his comic cartoons in The New Yorker and other smart chatts, became a professional actor with Alexander Dean's South Shore Players at Cohasset last night.

And a Town Hall full of Social Registerites from summer residences in the surrounding countryside was there to see him to do it.

The play was "Most of the Game" a comedy of manners written by John Van Druten when he swerved between the bitterness of "Flowers of the Forest" and the bonhomie of "The Distaff Side."

Let it be acknowledged at once that Most of the Game" is not among the major works of Mr. Van Druten. Bright and talky like most Van Druten dialogue, the plot and characters are shallow, and what is worse, familiar.

Nevertheless, "Most of the Game" does contain a good fat part for Mr. Arno, a part which the cartoonist tosses off much in the manner of his famous slap dash drawings . . .

As secretary to a gentleman who has gained great success at writing novels, Mr. Arno is enabled to be a humorous, if not entirely innocent bystander at the strange game going on around him.

And on the notion that the bystander sees the "most of the game," Mr. Arno is able, by virtue of his position to know and see all.

The game in this instance is the old one of scrambled affections between husband and wife, the husband a novelist and secretary, and because he used to be a newspaperman and is therefore accustomed to other people's troubles, Mr. Arno is mainly finds himself the mender of several broken hearts and the peace of emotional wounds.

Other characters besides the author and Mr. Arno are a [illegible] who wears a stuffed shirt of a massive actor, and a [illegible] professor from Oxford and his daughter.

Apparently [illegible] to take on characters more than two feet away from the parlor furniture and a cocktail shaker which is of the same inanimate [illegible] as the famed milk pitcher of Elmer and Bauer. Mr. Van Druten [illegible] is a most wordy man, [illegible] gave for such action as Mr. Arno and his character give it. In scene's [illegible] moments Mr. Arno [illegible] up to the audience as well as the play. Mr. Arno [illegible] to [illegible] administer a friend's [illegible] [illegible] then goes on and gets [illegible] a drink.

Robert Shayne, Jane Buchanan and Natalie Schafer are also in "Most of the Game," but it is Peter Arno who gives it fun. And though you wouldn't say that Mr. Arno is not as much at home on the stage as he is at his drawing board, you may say, and be sure of it, that he has a way with him that ought to take him in the theater as far as he likes.

Already brewing in the kitchen of the Broadway theater's [illegible] are [illegible] Some Like It Hot" [illegible] Arno's manuscript [illegible] Mr. Arno be an actor on that [illegible] . . .

Peter Arno, whose modesty forbids him giving his public a broad smile, does manage a coy grin in this self-portrait. Mr. Arno is appearing this week in "Most of the Game" with the South Shore Players at Cohasset.

Why Leaders Have Become More Hopeful

Forbes Says New Deal Reforms Seem to Have Reached Their Apex

By B. C. FORBES

The upheaval in France, culminating in separating the franc from gold, would have been sufficient to unsettle our investment markets under ordinary circumstances. The improvement exhibited here must, therefore, have had potent cause.

B. C. Forbes

In my opinion the enhanced hopefulness stemmed, not from any sudden betterment in business, but from encouragement generated in the highest circles by labor and political developments.

First, Congress exhibited a greater degree of independence. Administration leaders, it was revealed, had abandoned all thought of coercing Congress to endorse the reorganizing of the Supreme Court according to President Roosevelt's original plan. Moreover, opposition to wholesale branding of taxpayers became as pronounced within the probing committee that treasury witnesses were muzzled, at least for the time being. In other ways, lawmakers are disclosing that they become disclined to be mere rubber stamps.

In short, leaders in business, industry, finance are reviving hopes that unsettling New Deal reforms have reached their apex and that Washington will become less of a disturbing factor hereafter.

* * *

Second, and perhaps of more immediate influence on sentiment, many symptoms suggest that public sentiment has turned decidedly against conniving at or abetting labor lawlessness on the part of politicians.

Already the governors of Ohio and Pennsylvania have turned from using military force to keep plants closed to utilizing military force to enable wage earners to return to work if they so desire. Michigan's legislature has passed a law for Governor Murphy's signature, which would officially forbid repetition of recent high-handed acts by strikers and their allies. It is greatly offering with the constitutional liberties of citizens of communities.

President Roosevelt has not yet seen fit to go further than to quote Shakespeare's "A plague on both your houses" referring to strikers and resisting employers.

But, because of the way public opinion is turning against destruction of private property, against resort to violence to prevent men from working, against dynamiting property to cripple plants, against the irresponsibility of CIO leaders and against their whole strategy and conduct, men of affairs are beginning to feel that from now on political office holders will become more disposed to enforce law and order.

* * *

Attempting to forecast how things will go in this country during the second half of the year would involve more boldness than prudence.

Despite the vitality still manifest in many lines of trade and industry, as depicted by statistics, this writer sees signs of slackening. There is more than a possibility, there is probability, that a summer recession will appear in many directions.

However, stocks and second grade bonds were depressed so substantially that they may, very logically, experience a spell of recovery.

What may happen in the fall is anybody's guess. Much will depend upon intervening events in politics in labor in international affairs.

Supreme Court decisions will also enter the picture and may materially alter one way or the other.

BASIS FOR FEAR REDUCED

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 6—Last week, the stock market made a significant rally. This rally was significant, not because of its breadth or sharpness, but because of surrounding conditions and the level at which it came.

Although the news has been threatening, the volume of trading has been very small. It will be remembered that a week ago I noted especially low volume. Aside from "special situations" such as the decline in Western Union and the rise in Phillip Morris, there was nothing doing but a reaction in railway stocks.

A good many observers remembered the old maxim, "never sell a dull market." And it certainly worked this time as those short of American Telephone learned.

The market has acted as if it were sold to a standstill.

Then, too, the rally came at just where the lower resistance level was indicated by composite averages. It started at a point below which further declines would have looked very discouraging. Thus, there is the possibility of definite resistance at a "double bottom."

Finally, I note that the customary pattern of the decline since March may have been broken. In each reaction wave there have been two "gaps" in the averages. This time, however, there has been only one—on Saturday, June 26. The leading stocks failed to crack again on Monday, and there was no volume of liquidation.

This may well be the "tip" that the downward "channel" or path has ceased. Anyhow, the leadership on Wednesday was good, the advance was the broadest in several weeks, and the ground gained was fully held on Thursday.

On the whole, I am inclined to think that bottom has probably been seen, and that new high prices will come eventually, perhaps in the fall. In some respects, the charts resemble the spring of 1926, when a rising market was checked to about the same extent—more sharply, but not so long. If this analogy holds, there should be no new low in the averages, the rally should carry to the previous high, where, after a period of "consolidation," the bull market would be resumed.

Conditions are not the same as in 1926. We cannot expect any exactly similar action. But something like this seems as reasonable a guess as any.

* * *

One main factor now is the accumulation of idle investment funds. Not only has much money been withdrawn since last fall, but much more has been saved and not gone into the market. In addition, many millions of foreign funds are held in banks here.

On the one hand, all this money draws next to no interest. On the other hand, stock yields are attractive. The average yield on twenty common stocks which I compile is 4.78 per cent. That is not bad. Why, then, does all this money not pour into such stocks?

The answer is fear—fear of the New Deal, fear of the CIO, fear of European war.

But now it actually seems that the basis for these fears are being somewhat reduced. Certainly increased resistance to the New Deal program has developed. The CIO has certainly met reverses. And while war seems to lie ahead, a period of growing inflation and rearmament demand is likely to come first.

Anyhow, it can't be denied that a better investment demand has appeared of late. This is seen in the way the large issue of duPont preferred stock was snapped up, as well as in the ready sale of several recent bond issues. The usual early-July reinvestment demand has appeared.

Add to these things, the fact that (1) farm prospects are unusually favorable, and that (2) a world-wide demand for iron and steel and copper assures support to those basic industries, and you can see why the outlook for stocks is the best since last Fall.

Farm stocks, oils, metals, steels and chemicals seem to be the most likely ones at the moment.

REO MOTOR

Sales Limited to Output

Sales of Reo Motor Car Co.'s commercial vehicles—speed wagons, heavy-duty trucks and buses—during the six months ended June 30 have been governed entirely by the company's ability to produce. Current backlog of unfilled orders and continuing heavy demand indicate this condition will continue well into the September quarter.

Despite a late start on production due to several late changes in model design and a two months' closing down, starting March 10, caused by labor trouble, production during the first five months totaled 8318 units, against 4564 in the like 1936 period.

Unfilled orders totaled 2700 units, against 360 at this time last year. This is a record bank for this time of year. Demand, though showing a slightly less-than-seasonal slackening this month, continued heavy.

While operations during the latter part of May and early June have been at a profit, the quarter ended June 30 will show a loss. This results from the strike and consequent heavy expenses of again getting into production and from higher materials and labor costs.

Company's selling prices now have been advanced more than enough to offset the increased manufacturing costs, so if sales continue at anything like current levels the September quarter will probably show a profit.

June quarter's loss will be considerably less than the $260,495 loss shown in the March quarter, during which period the company charged off $124,464 in depreciation and tool amortization, and will compare with net profit of $113, or less than one cent a share, in the June quarter of 1936.

For six months ended June 30 the net loss will be greater than the $195,253 loss reported for the six months ended June 30 1936, but for the months ending September 30, next, present indications are that a profit will be shown as compared with loss of $222,188 in the like 1936 period.

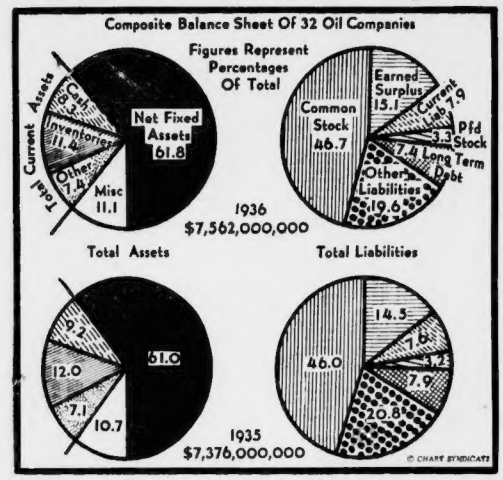
Increase in Assets of Oil Companies



A composite balance sheet of 32 major oil companies, representing almost two-thirds of the American petroleum industry, would show total assets at the end of 1936 of $7,562,235,000, an increase of $185,843,000 or 2½ per cent over the 1935 year-end.

The figures, as compiled by C. H. Pforzheimer & Co. show that the greatest amount of assets are "fixed" in properties, plants, and equipment. These fixed assets, after reserves for depreciation and depletion, increased $164,780,000 in 1936.

On the other side of the balance sheet, the book value of common stock accounts for the largest item. There was an increase of $141,619,000 in this item last year. Preferred stock, bonds and other long-term debt are generally of secondary importance in the oil industry.

Current liabilities increased $37,394,000 in 1936. Current liabilities were 3.28 times current liabilities at the end of 1936. A year previously the ratio was 3.63.

Franc Devaluation Will Have Little Effect on U.S.

While the current French financial crisis will probably have an important bearing on European political situation, it will have little influence on American trade or security markets, says the United Business Service in its current report. The devaluation of the franc has been expected for a long time in informed quarters, and French gold will advance again to offset the cheaper franc in world markets.

The Service points out that the French internal situation has been growing more complicated ever since 1926. The investment budget has never been balanced, and in the last two or three years the outward movement of capital has been formidable and continuous. The French gold reserve is now down to a point which the military authorities consider absolutely necessary as a war reserve. Inability to draw gold from the Bank of France will now serve, however, to halt the exodus of gold from the country.

The Service concludes that while this evidence of weakness in the French economic position is indirectly unfavorable in its general implications, the backbone of present monetary agreements is the maintenance of the existing relationship between the dollar and the pound sterling. This relationship will remain unaffected by French action.

Bank Call

Washington, July 7 (AP)—The comptroller of the currency issued a call today for the condition of all national banks at the close of business Wednesday, June 30.

Barnsdall's Half-Year Net Higher

With production of crude oil running ahead of 1936, indications are that net profits of Barnsdall Oil Co for the first six months will approximate $1,900,000 equal to 95 cents a share, or an increase of about 25 per cent over the net in the similar period last year. In 1936 in the first half the company earned $1,209,984 after charges, equal to 54 cents a share on 2,240,711 shares of $5 par capital stock outstanding.

On basis of the first six months' earnings Barnsdall's indicated earnings in the second quarter will equal about 40 cents a share. This would compare with actual net of $591,155, or 25 cents a share in the first quarter and with $738,881, or 33 cents a share in June quarter of 1936.

For all of 1936 the company earned $2,262,584 after charges, equal to $1 a share.

Goebel Brewing's Earnings to Show Drop

In spite of a gain in its percentage of total Michigan beer sales, Goebel Brewing Co.'s second-quarter earnings are expected to fall considerably below those of a year ago. Higher material prices will more than offset the indicated increase in sales.

Last year the company reported earnings by 12-month periods instead of by quarters. It is understood, however, that net profit for the second quarter of 1936 was approximately 25 cents a share.

This year's second quarter is not expected to show more than 15 cents a share, which would compare with nine cents a share in the March quarter. Earlier expectations were for somewhat more than this, but the substantial sales gains over 1936 recorded in the first four months were not continued into May.

Bank of France Reduces Rate

Paris, July 6 (INS)—The Bank of France today reduced its discount rate from 6 to 8 per cent.

The Outlet Company

The Outlet Co. declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 per share on first preferred stock, $1.50 on second preferred and 75 cents on common, all payable August 2 to stock of record July 21.

CITES OBSOLETE BUSINESS METHODS

MUCH TRUTH CONCEALED

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.)

New York, July 6—Business is needlessly flayed at public whipping posts because of the obsolescence of its methods of telling the world about itself. Modern in superficials, representative corporations are backward, in this respect, in fundamentals. In the modern mood, they will sponsor radio entertainment and spend millions to achieve popular good will. Yet in the annual accounting to the public, these same companies hurt their own interests by using archaic accounting methods.

Thus they conceal from the public the essential truth that labor gets the lion's share of the gross receipts of the typical corporation, and that tax collectors garner in vastly more than the owners.

Yet, with its back against the wall, in the face of uninformed social criticism, big business still adheres to pre-depression accounting methods. In 1929 and before, accounting technique was often subordinated to the desire of investment bankers and speculative financiers to make the stock attractive to outsiders. Moreover, full and free expression of the truth through accounting was further restrained by the reluctance of management to reveal too many secrets to competitors.

NEW PERIOD

But we are now in a new period. Market motives and narrow competitive considerations are frivolous in face of the pounding which politicians and labor agitators are giving to organized business.

As long as corporate management conceals the true facts in the labyrinth of accounting jargon which the lay public does not understand, it cripples its own case before the bar of public opinion. In the interest of preserving the American way, with its competitive economic system, it is incumbent on the chartered accountants and on the chief executives of corporations to modernize their periodical financial reports.

Once the truth is revealed so simply that it can be visualized by taxi drivers, bricklayers and farmers, the well-known American sense of fair play will operate. This American subtlety of judgment is already becoming manifest in public distrust over excesses in recent strikes.

MODERN ACCOUNTING

For a considerable period this column has been getting somewhat lone voice crying in the wilderness, has repeatedly urged modern accounting which would satisfy social curiosity as well as the speculative interest of the public.

This writer has urged that in annual reports companies reveal their total receipts, and show how they were used to pay workers, to meet taxes, to pay wages for the use of tools in the form of dividends and interest, and to meet other expenses.

Fransy Eakin, intelligent controller of the A. E. Staley manufacturing company of Decatur, Illinois, who has a fine grasp of the social significance of modern accounting, presents in the organ of the Controllers Institute of America a technique for meeting the objections which this writer has outlined.

EAKIN POINTS OUT

"The (proposed type of) statement clearly reveals that profits are ever so large, that they are paid by customers as a return to the owners, and it also reveals that if wages to employees or taxes to government are to be increased, the customers must pay more, the owners must be paid less. When put in this form all of the interested parties—customers, public, government, employes and owners—are fully informed, that they may deal justly with one another, and in such dealings find a method by which individual and national well-being may be advanced."

Once accountants and controllers modernize their bookkeeping methods, they are likely to supplement, if not displace, lawyers as the chief advisors of major business executives. Accounting is no longer a mere set of conventions for promoting the sale of securities. It can be a major instrument in the control and direction of plants and a principal device for enabling voting workers and customers to judge the efficiency and social usefulness of individual corporate enterprises.

Business Outlook Clouded

New York, July 6—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, currently comments as follows:

"Business activity is being maintained at reasonably satisfactory levels, but the near term outlook continues to call for caution. While the back of the steel strike appears to have been broken, threats of further serious disturbances this summer, the unsettled political situation abroad, and prospects that the administration will press its various reform measures at the present session of Congress are likely to continue to depress sentiment.

"Developments in the steel strike have been encouraging in that, for the first time, the coercive and unlawful tactics of the CIO have been successfully combated, at least temporarily, by industrial managements. An aroused public opinion was obviously responsible for the setback, and it is possible that the strikers in the steel plants mark the turning point in the entire movement. However, further disturbances threaten in numerous lines and the administration is still definitely pro-CIO, despite the growing resentment of the public.

"It is impossible, of course, to forecast labor's next move. It is conceivable that the CIO will continue to press its fight against the steel companies, issue more unreasonable demands from General Motors, and follow later in the summer with a drive against Ford.

* * *

"On the other hand, the much room growth of the CIO has presented many problems to its leaders. Its members have been getting out of hand, and expenses of conducting strikes have been very heavy. It may be, therefore, that the labor leaders will consider it advisable to go slow over the next few months in an attempt to consolidate their position and to strengthen the internal structure of the organization before renewing the drive. Possible results of the meeting next November of the American Federation of Labor, which is preparing for an active campaign against the CIO, will mark the real crisis.

"In either event, it is difficult to view the labor outlook with equanimity. Eventually, legislation designed to define the responsibilities on the unions will probably be enacted, and the possibilities of such a development at the present session of Congress are not favorable."

Paris Commodity Marts to Reopen

Paris, July 6 (AP)—A decree of the Ministry of Finance, published under the full powers law recently granted the Chautemps government to save French finances, ordered the reopening of commodity markets today.

N. Y. Telephone Stations Gain

New York Telephone Co. reports a gain of 4085 stations during June compared with a loss of 1745 in June, 1936, a loss of 8534 stations in June, 1935, loss of 4903 in June, 1934, and loss of 14,758 in June, 1933.

For the first six months this year there was a gain of 71,040, against a gain of 42,405 stations in the 1936 period, a gain of 8318 in the 1935 period, a gain of 37,771 in the 1934 period and a loss of 99,775 in the first six months of 1933.

Credit Men Elect Fielden

Mr. Fielden has been in close touch with the affairs of the National Association, having been a director in 1934 and vice-president in 1935.

Consumer Incomes Touching Peak

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Strikes, predicted trade recessions and fears of trouble abroad are just so much talk insofar as the outlook for consumer incomes in the next six months are concerned. The Brookmire Income Map released today estimates the United States will show an increase of 21 per cent over last year in the half year to come.

And the striking thing about the graphic indicator is that in only one small section is there the telltale patch of white—poor prospects. The top token of jet black, indicative of good prospects, does not show up in the New England area in the marked fashion of a few months back. But to our way of looking at the situation this is a matter for satisfaction, since the outlook is measured in terms of improvement over a year ago and all know that New England has been a step ahead of the rest of the country since the low of 1932.

Limited price variety chains had a better year in 1936 than in 1929. It is almost a "believe it or not" record in view of their market action, and it would be hard to understand if it were not for the carefully compiled records of the Harvard Business School, which were made public today. Total dollar sales were larger than in 1935 by 9.5 and topped the previous peak year of 1929 by a substantial amount. The significant part of the record is that sales made a new top on lower price scales.

• • •

All told, the 1936 figures were set on slightly lower percentage expenses, somewhat higher net percentage earnings which, though smaller than those of 1929, were quite satisfactory. Another interesting point in light of the report is the fact that the highest earnings were achieved by 5-10-25-cent chains. Size, up, it looks as though pre-conceived ideas that limited price variety stores are good entering impressions only must be put one side.

• • •

The stock market looks as though it were coming around the corner. And while it has not taken as long to mount as that other famous corner it has been mighty trying waiting for it to do so. Prices are down more than enough on the average, as measured by other intermediate reaction bull market bulwarks, and a turn in here would be most logical. The levels printed here many weeks back were not made by the industrials. Rails shipped to about the prices expected and our composite average did the same. Despite all this we do not think there is any need to hurry. The list is not going to pound in one session or one week and we prefer to see just how well it behaves during a secondary reaction.

• • •

It is difficult for the non-professional observer to understand a waiting attitude. But a look back to last year's low points will supply a good answer. Then a relatively quick bottom was made as the market prepared to discount a sharp upswing in trade. Nonetheless individual averages took weeks to make bases.

Notebook: Four or more leading investment counselors are saying the following stocks are worth attention . . . Allied Stores, Campbell, Wyant & Cannon, Borg Warner, Glidden, Electric Autolite, Phillips Fete and Pittsburgh Oil . . . And when things look right for buying either in one's own eyes or through those of an advisor don't forget oil equipments . . . They have been on the column's list for weeks . . . And if the petroleum section does one-half the things some people expect it to do stocks as National Supply, Byron Jackson and Bridgeport Machine are going to be front runners in our opinion.

Steel Operations Off in Week

New York, July 6 (AP)—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 7.7 points to 67.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 75.0 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 70.2 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 67.2 per cent.

STOCKS in Broad UPSWING

GAINS RUN TO 7 POINTS

New York, July 6—The advance in stocks gained momentum in late forenoon dealings today, as earlier gains running from 1 to 3 points were increased to more than 5 in the leaders and as much as 7 in individual issues.

U. S. Steel led the way for industrials. The stock opened 1¼ points higher at 104¾, slipped moderately under realizing, then jumped above 105 for a net gain of better than four points. Bethlehem gained more than three and Youngstown over two.

The largest advance was shown by Case in farm implements, the issue soaring more than seven points to around 168. Other individual features were Westinghouse, up almost 5, American Can 3, Philip Morris more than 2 to another new 1937 peak, and N. Y. Central 2.

Bonds moved up with the stock list. Grains were easier, although most other commodity markets were strong. Cotton was steady.

CURRENT ITEMS

The fact that new passenger car sales in May, above those in previous strikes that cut down production, were reported by R. L. Polk & Co., as only 1 per cent less than for the same month in 1936 was noted.

Reduction of the discount rate of the Bank of France from 3 per cent from 6 per cent was taken as an indication the Chautemps government had weathered, for the time at least, the financial crisis which last week caused suspension of gold payments. Brokers said, however, they expected no immediate flight of French capital from American securities.

Of interest were statistics showing copper sales during the first half of the year were only 477,700 tons, compared with 627,700 during the last half of 1936. Those close to the industry pointed out that shipments were nearly twice the sales, and asserted it was possible a large potential demand has been built up during the light sales era.

In opening dealings the pound sterling was quoted at $4.99 3-32, off a cent, and the French franc at 3.85¼ cents, up .01 of a cent.

Brown, Harriman Assets Increase

The financial statement of Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co., private bankers, as of June 30, 1937, shows an increase in total assets to $103,135,929, the highest figure since the firm began publishing its statements in 1934. This compares with total assets of $92,665,-908 on March 31, 1937. Capital and surplus increased to $12,862,173, compared with $12,709,804 three months ago.

Total deposits of $66,286,586 compare with $57,745,608 on March 31st. Loans and advances were $21,492,575, compared with $17,118,-013 three months ago.

Report Sharp Gains In La. Employment

New Orleans, July 6—Sharp gains in employment in private industry are reported by the Louisiana state employment service. The total of 1616 jobs filled in private industry during the month of May represented an increase of 196.5 per cent over the figure for May, 1936.

Among the reasons cited for the rise is the success of Governor Richard W. Leche's three-point industrialization program, to attract new plants and factories. The program includes property tax exemption for a period of 10 years.

Rights

Stockholders of record July 10 can subscribe to the new shares of Armstrong Cork Co. at $45 a share in ratio of one share for every six held. Rights expire July 30.

Comments of Brokers

The action of the market during the past three days appears to confirm the previous impression that the industrial stocks have been in an accumulation range during recent weeks and would respond any recessions from current levels as buying opportunities.—E. A. Pierce & Co.

The market as a whole seems strongly situated to support a sustained upturn in the general level of prices. Therefore, we would not be in a hurry to accept profits in what we originally stated during the past three months.—J. F. Molloy, Hornblowr & Weeks.

Subject to technical dips, we anticipate extension of last week's recovery movement.—J. S. Bache & Co.

A brief period of irregularity and flattening out, over the next few weeks could well be followed by an important upswing in prices. Advocate a policy of selective buying in this period.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Olden Friendship Halted by Peace

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Russia and Japan are picking up an old friendship that was interrupted by peace some time ago.

At that time Japanese guns pointed by Argonauts said to Russian battleships made in America.

That's one time we were in a war on both sides. It proved you could run with the hare and hunt with the hounds.

The Russian battleships Retvizan and Variag were built at Cramps Yard, Philadelphia, in 1900 and got a nice Japanning in 1904.

P. S. That was one war without a debt. We got paid on delivery or no dice.

Shipping Labor to Get a Fair Deal

SETTLEMENT of labor problems in the shipping industry, vital to a successful American Merchant Marine, is the next major objective of the Maritime Commission.

It has already put into effect subsidy agreements enabling American ship owners to operate on an equal competitive basis with foreign rivals.

It has now wisely turned to the question of labor disputes which, until they are adjusted, hamper all other efforts to revive the industry.

Maritime labor is assured of a FAIR DEAL by the commission.

CHAIRMAN Joseph P. Kennedy has repeatedly insisted that America, to have a Merchant Marine capable of meeting world competition, must have MORE THAN SHIPS.

It must preserve AMERICAN STANDARDS on the seas, which means American levels of wages and working conditions.

That is exactly what shipping subsidies are for, to make it possible for American lines to provide decent working conditions and to pay good wages.

The labor hearings to be conducted by the commission, beginning July 13, will determine the benefits to which LABOR IS FAIRLY ENTITLED.

THE American people do not want a Merchant Marine operated on any other basis. They are putting up public money to establish the best shipping industry in the world, and they want American labor to prosper and be happy in it.

The Maritime Commission, under Chairman Kennedy, is displaying sound judgment in its approach to its most important task, by making INDUSTRIAL PEACE the keystone of the new Merchant Marine.

Made-to-Order Lightning

THE curiosity of man knows no bounds. From the hour the cave dweller left his hands and knees and learned to walk on two feet, man has pursued his ceaseless exploration, constantly looking into the unknown.

Through powerful glasses he looks out to the far distant planets. In airplanes he rises far above the earth and gases down upon it. In submarines he sinks below the surface of the sea and combs the ocean floor.

Still man is not satisfied. He now thinks that in the billions of atoms that comprise a penny there is locked sufficient power to drive the biggest liner across the Atlantic. And he is determined to prove his supposition.

That is why M. I. T. scientists have moved huge electrostatic generators from the late Colonel Green's South Dartmouth estate to Cambridge.

They are lightning bolt hurlers, these generators. Ten million volts and more they will throw against the infinitesimal atom—and then? No one knows. Perhaps Nature's most potent force will be set free to serve us. Or perhaps we shall see nothing more than a man-made thunder storm.

"A Tough Place," He Said

THE former boxer who faced Superior Court in Worcester last week took issue with the poet who observed that "stone walls and iron bars do not a prison make."

Given a two-year suspended sentence, the ex-pugilist frowned and informed the court:

"Aw, Your Honor, State Prison is a tough place."

Now, isn't that too bad?

Perhaps, if we tore down our present institutions and erected hotel-like penitentiaries with all the luxuries of Lake Placid, prisoners would like them better.

We might offer additional inducements, such as rooms with baths for robbers, suites with valet service for forgers, and private offices for confidence men.

We might. But we won't. Not so long as we preserve our sanity.

When the day comes that every law violator realizes that prison IS "a tough place," this country can expect a reduction in its 15-billion-dollar crime bill.

Communism and Cancer

THE Catholic Daughters of America, convening at Bretton Woods, N. H., wisely regard cancer and Communism as malignant diseases.

The Daughters, world's largest organization of women, do well to speak of cancer and Communism in the same breath. Both are tumors.

The destructionist who fastens himself on the national body to send roots of hatred and bitterness into the sound structure of government is no less a tumor than the one that consumes the human body.

Those who deliberately disrupt the peaceful relations of the people in industry certainly are cancers.

Those who inject creeds of discord into our social and economic life are worse than cancers.

Every alien ism brought into this country for the purpose of undermining democratic ideals and American principles represents the constant gnawing of a cancer at the flesh and blood of REAL AMERICA.

Eradication of POLITICAL CANCER is the duty of every citizen. The Catholic Daughters are to be congratulated for showing the way.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 6—There is much, too much, being said about Youth's state of mind. His revolt and defiance of what Communists like to sneer is "the old order." His defiance a n d contempt for the Scriptural injunctions to hear the squawkers, Youth has slipped the halter.

O. O. McIntyre

And is capering, like the frisky colt, along dangerous paths. Every generation has had its fling of wild youth. The boy who swigged hard cider in the secrecy of the hay mow is today gulping cocktails openly in the gilded bars. It is one and the same thing in different setting.

But little is heard of the vast majority of boys who are bucking realities without a whimper. Working hard by day to pay for school tuition by night. I know of one in especial whose parents are employed. Due to their tasks, the three meet but twice a week for dinner.

And what joyous interludes they are. Each has a thrift account. Twice a month they attend a neighborhood movie together. On Sundays they hike in the Jersey hills or visit the museums. There are many such boys who will be the background of our future democracy.

Elsa Maxwell is said to be infusing the forlorn Paris and Riviera crowds with the same hoop-la that characterized her winter season in New York. Her art is the simple trick of making grownups put on masquerade costumes and play childish games with almost unbelievable ardor and glee. Her own comedy is exactly that of the town cutup who bounces into the room wearing a woman's hat hind-side foremost.

Expatriates were wilting with ennui when she came along and started them bobbing for apples and hunting lost treasures.

It was interesting the other night over coffee at Dick Berlin's to hear one of the professional psychologists express his reasoning about the brief span of Hollywood stars. He believes that the high pay into which they have been catapulted out of obscurity stifles natural genius.

Acting, he contends, needs a challenge. Once the artist has everything he wants, he grows soft and ambitionless, careless in his work, bored with the plaudits and the next one hears he is broke and jobless. And wondering why.

Robert E. Sherwood, the playwright, is a subscriber to the idea that Hollywood often swamps ambition. He quit an enormously high-salaried job out there because he thought his pay too high and the work too easy. He believes that if an artist desired, say an ancient castle in England, he would put forth his best creative efforts to secure the wherewithal for that realization, but if it came to a sudden windfall it would not be likely to spur its artistic sids to greatest endeavor.

A hair dresser—who has none of them as customers—declares that the most attractive outfittres are those of Kay Francis, Miriam Hopkins, Ina Claire, Genevieve Tobin, Mary Boland, Mrs. Walter Chrysler, Mrs. William H. Hays and Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger.

It used to be that no juvenile on stage or screen could go very far without a Grecian bob or a dandy marcelle. But Fred Astaire put an end to all that. Slightly bald, he could in no way suggest a harried and withered little bookkeeper. But he has the good appealing of all box-office drags—personality.

On the feminine side — Patsy Kelly is a constant example of that personality and not looks will bring home the bacon.

Jacques Bustanoby, once the Sherman Billingsly, Jack Kriendler and John Perona all-in-one on the restaurant front, is to open another Bustanoby's this fall. He reigned in the days of the Castle Walk, the days when glittering Diamond Jim swept nightly into the Domino Room with a Dolly sister on each arm, the era indeed that our generation now calls "the good old days." And were rather fine at that.

Soliloquy: Columnists and others who annotate for the public prints learn early in their careers that the most eager disciples of the great god publicity are secretive. And quite naturally, for it is a fuel that keeps their professional life aflame.

On the other hand, no class is so sensitive to the mildest form of criticism. We may trumpet the talents of actors for years, but once we sound a dissenting note they let go with a vigorous blast of what-for. They can't take it.

Add jitter jets: A dyspeptic little Milquetoast came to his suburban home one evening to find his daughter preparing to run off to marry a city chap. In a frenzy, he spanked: "All right. But remember if you go you stay went. No more of your hot mother's biscuits."

Another Declaration of Independence

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The people of the United States have duly observed another anniversary of their Declaration of Independence.

But they are interested at the moment in REMAINING INDEPENDENT of the seething cauldron of European troubles and intrigues.

France is at the brink of a financial abyss to which years of RECKLESS SPENDING have brought it.

Spain is still in the throes of a civil conflict into which the MEDDLING POLITICS of other nations have plunged it.

Russia and Japan are at the threshold of a war to which AMBITIONS FOR POWER have led them.

RELIEF — there's a problem which America has never before faced. Temporary help after great catastrophes—fire, flood, earthquake, and drought—yes! But never before an organized, lasting dole.

Elsie Robinson

What effect is that dole going to have on American initiative, American self-respect?

Last night, in a new restaurant, I saw American marching in mixed thousands... MARCHING IN ANGRY PROTEST AGAINST WITHDRAWING THE DOLE.

What, I wonder, is YOUNG AMERICA'S reaction to this?

How do healthy, high-spirited boys and girls feel about accepting Relief? Here are two letters—PRO and CON—sizzlers, both!

First comes JULI EAVES—In favor OF.

Struck out for herself and ran smash, into Ole Man Depression. Was offered a job "on the lowest rung of the Relief Administration Staff."

Worked in every department—finally earned a place as full-fledged executive, and now she's 100 per cent for relief. Why?

"Because," says Juli, "I saw people, who were demoralized by hunger and fear, grasp Relief and make a fresh start in life, with new courage and faith.

"I've seen young people, from 18 to 30, build a solid standard of living and a great co-operative spirit through the help the government gave.

"More than any other group, Relief has given Youth a chance. Many were given their first boost, and never lost that priceless possession—confidence in themselves.

"True, many fell by the wayside, but this minority represents the ever-present social indigents without whom no civilized nation exists.

"Relief has not broken Youth. It has been a teacher; a hard teacher, but one that has given us Life in shirtsleeves.

"JULI EAVES.
"Oklahoma City, Okla."
($10 prize winner.)

SHE CAN'T AGREE

But IDA BELL doesn't agree. Hard times hit Ida Bell hard, too. She's suffering from a chronic illness she lost her business, her savings — everything but a cheap car.

"I've watched relief work out in Chicago and Milwaukee," she cries, "and I'm so disgusted with the people on relief I would like to stop the whole business. At least 95 per cent of the people on relief are there to stay. They don't want to work and won't work unless compelled to.

"I have tried to get good easy jobs for four women who were on relief, but they never even came in for an interview. When I questioned them later their answer was: 'The government is rich; why should we give up easy living?' I know of dozens of men who have a chance for decent jobs, but once this type finds easy living, you can't get them started again.

"There are JOBS, plenty of them, awaiting these people, but as long as the government supports them, they refuse to take and kind of work. "IDA BELL, Chicago, Ill." ($10 prize winner.)

Yes, we can all point to many a Horrible Example of spineless parasiting. But the real American spirit is still on the job—and here's a proof if it.

FREDERICK PRICE doesn't believe in taking either the count or the dole. "IF YOU CAN'T FIND A JOB," says he, "MAKE ONE FOR YOURSELF! How? As your Grandfather—out of elbow grease and spunk!

"Instead of pestering employers for jobs, why shouldn't young people start in business for themselves, using whatever talents and education they possess. Make, produce, or sell their own, be it shoe strings, homemade pies or what not.

"We all have at hand the materials for making a start. This may call for putting our pride in the background and getting along with less until the ball starts rolling; but once it starts rolling we can have everything we want, without looking up to a Big Boss or punching a time clock.

"FREDERICK GEO PRICE (38)
"Toledo, Ohio."
($5 prize winner)

RULES

1—The writer of a letter in competition for one of the three weekly prizes must be under 30 years of age.

2—The letter must be upon some subject of importance to American Youth.

3—The letter must not exceed 300 words in length.

4—The writer must give his or her age and full name and address, and the name of each writer awarded a prize will be published.

5—To be eligible for the prize awarded each week, a letter must bear postmark not later than noon of the preceding Saturday.

The Marry-Go-Round

-:- -:- By Helen Rowland

When a man knows that he's got to go through with a disagreeable and embarrassing parting-forever scene with a girl, he wants to get it over, and be done with it as quickly and painlessly as possible. And then he wants to FORGET it!

But, when a woman is "calling it a day," she likes to do it leisurely and gracefully. She doesn't want to be rushed through anything —even a fight. She wants the "parting" and the return of the ring to have all the dramatic and emotional touches that she thinks her feelings are entitled to at least this last, sad moment.

After that, she lays the dead episode tenderly away in the rosemary-and-rue of her memory, to be exhumed and dreamed over, every now and then—even after she's happily married to someone else.

In the sweet, old sentimental days, when men made effective gestures like saving the flower a girl had worn and pressing it in a volume of Keats, and keeping locks of hair or photographs in the backs of their watch-cases, everything was glamorous and different.

Nowadays, when love dies, nobody ever bothers to come to the funeral—not even the corpse! It's usually just a simple case of malnutrition, anyhow, so an autopsy is quite unnecessary.

Consequently, there's no graveyard where a broken-hearted lover can go to weep amidst the myrtle. All the old memories are "gone with the wind"; the letters, keepsakes and mementoes have reached the "who-the-dickens-can-have-owned-that" and the old engagement rings have been re-set and are as good as new—sometimes, even better.

Of course, even in this age of stream-lined, lighting-change love, no girl wants to make more than more unhappy than necessary when throwing him over. But, alas, the fact remains that nothing in the way of a fracture seems to heal more quickly than a modern man's broken heart.

No matter how badly lacerated his affections may have been, they appear to recover and be in a responsive working condition in a week or so.

A Jefferson Memorial

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Thomas Jefferson was near bankruptcy in his old age. New York raised $8500, Philadelphia, $5000 and Baltimore, $3000, to make it possible for him to save Monticello. He had spent $182,000 in building the University of Virginia.

Edwin C. Hill

In Washington, there is under consideration a Jefferson memorial, to cost $2,000,000, an august, marble-pillared temple, designed by John Russell Pope of New York. Just before he died, Jefferson requested that his gravestone be a three-foot cube, with this inscription:

"Here was buried Thomas Jefferson, Author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom, and Father of the University of Virginia."

He added that he wanted only this inscription "because by them, as testimonials that I have lived I wish most to be remembered."

Jefferson was the last man in the world to yearn for marmoreal splendors. If he had had his choice of having a $2,000,000 monument or having 3,000,000 persons read and hear what he wrote, he certainly would have chosen the latter. And if this proportion of our electorate could and would "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the teachings of Thomas Jefferson, it would profoundly change our whole national life—for the better.

HIS LOVE AND LIFE.

Speaking of memorials, Monticello is privately owned, and you have to pay admission to visit it. There, out on a line running from the house to the edge of the bluff, Jefferson watched through his spyglass the rise and fall of his beloved university, five miles away.

It was his love and his life. He had garnered wisdom and knowledge, but he knew there were continents of learning on and beyond. He knew the new nation must extend its intellectual as well as its geographical frontiers. He impoverished himself to leave America this heritage.

Hervey Allen's biography of Edgar Allen Poe gives an account of Jefferson's heroic zeal in this work, profoundly moving as it unfolds his luminous vision of an America made free and strong by enlightenment. He said with passionate conviction that no matter how rich we might become, we would be impoverished and we would fail if we did not gain commensurate knowledge.

Three million dollars would have seemed an overwhelming sum to Thomas Jefferson. With that amount of money, he could have staffed his university with the greatest scholars of the world, and he could have concentrated great batteries of intellect on specific problems of national well-being—which certainly is what he would have done.

A FITTING MEMORIAL.

If Uncle Sam has $3,000,000 that is burning a hole in his pocket, why not give it to Thomas Jefferson's beloved old university? Why not pick the best possible faculty of economic researchers in this country and enjoin it thus:

"You will ascertain just what Thomas Jefferson wanted to know about America and its future, in the interests of its safety and solvency. You will undertake to supply the answers?"

There we would have not just another monument, but a Jeffersonian outreach for new truth which would do more to exalt his memory and to fulfill his hopes than a temple built of the Elgin marbles.

Several years ago, a friend of mine asked Lincoln Steffens why the reformers had failed.

"From Tom Johnson on down, you've had 30 years of it now," said my friend. "There's just as much graft as ever. Why didn't you change anything? What's the matter?"

"Because we didn't have sense enough to go after facts," said Steffens. "That is, important facts. We won a great many engagements, but we did not engage in or win any fight worth while. We were battling shad ows all those years. We were angry, emotional and ignorant.

"There isn't any hope for the country or the world until we humbly seek facts and learn not to get mad if they don't come our way."

Jefferson said as much, not long before he died. His desire for knowledge was hunger and thirst—for knowledge of politics and government, architecture, industry, agriculture, soil, the arts and humanities, crafts, human behavior—anything and everything that might give light in building a civilization.

What a magnificent memorial to Jefferson there would be in a scientific, profound and scholarly re-examination of the states' rights issue!

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

There was a celebrated gang fight among the blue stockings of Verona, Italy, some centuries ago. Shakespeare immortalized it in "Romeo and Juliet." The two gangs were the Montagues and Capulets.

Now, Mercutio, a friend of Romeo, a Montague, was slain by Tybalt of the Capulet gang.

"A plague on both your houses!"

President Roosevelt has used this speech to good effect in denouncing both labor and employer extremists.

It is a good slogan for Americans to adopt also in regard to Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Syndicalism and Nazism—"A plague on ALL your houses!"

Dr. Millikan, Nobel prize winner, finds that a study of cosmic rays "SHOWS HOW TO KNOW EXACTLY WHAT IS RIGHT FROM WHAT IS WRONG."

The cosmic rays have their home above the earth's atmosphere. Not even Dr. Millikan, according to his own confession, knows exactly what they are.

Just how these rays, then, can influence human conduct will puzzle the mind not schooled in these mysteries, as almost all of us are not.

It might be well for some of our scientists to drop these fantastic notions once in a while and turn their gaze INWARD. They will find there a cluster of rays that is absolutely beyond their instruments. It is called HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS.

It is this IMMATERIAL atmosphere in our skulls, in the domain of CONSCIOUSNESS, that questions of right and wrong are decided. CONSCIOUSNESS gives off the LIGHT OF THOUGHT from some HIDDEN SUN.

This CONSCIOUSNESS cannot be weighed, seen, felt or smelled. It cannot be caught in jars or bottles, and without it we would have no knowledge whatsoever of cosmic or any other kind of rays.

The hardest superstition to die (if superstition ever does die) is the one that eats bring good or bad luck. This Sphinx-like, soft-treading, world-enveloping fetish from time immemorial has been either a jinx or a mascot.

The startling effect of the British freighter Sandgate Castle recently was ascribed by some of the sailors to the presence of a cat that came aboard just before the boat left Brooklyn for South Africa.

Some of the believers in cats revolve around Tabby are. When cats wash their ears more than usual it is going to rain. The sneezing of a cat is good luck to a bride. But, if your cat sneezes three times on Friday you will be filled with colds. In Goethe's "Faust" Satan takes the form of a cat and a witch is always accompanied by a cat.

The most famous of the fables woven around cats is the KILKENNY CATS. These two Toms fought so ferociously, says the tale, that they finally swallowed one another.

Many of the prodigal sons of democracy in Russia are returning to sanity. They have dallied with Pinks and Reds only to return to American ideals of service with a "Thank the Lord" on their lips.

Sir Walter Citrine, Englishman; Andre Gide, Frenchman, and Norman Thomas, American, have lately unfolded their tales of Soviet Russia after paying it a visit which might be summed up in one word, "TERRIFYING!"

Now John Dos Passos, American radical writer, returns from Europe with these words about Stalin's proletarian paradise:

Of the Spanish Reds, Mr. Dos Passos says:

"THEY HAVE BROUGHT INTO SPAIN THE TROTSKY WITCH-HUNT."

This disillusioned internationalist finally says:

He suggests also that Americans work for "INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY VERSUS BUREAUCRATIC INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION."

That's what all Americans of the red, white and blue variety have ALWAYS worked for!
